

B. l. angl. pag. 161

P. o. angl.

360^v - 342.

No.

53.

Dedicated, by Permission, to
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES.

ANNOTATIONS

UPON

KING HENRY V.

AND

KING HENRY VI.

PART I.

BEING THE FIFTY-THIRD NUMBER OF

BELL'S Edition of

SHAKSPERE'S WORKS.

London: Sold by the Proprietor, BRITISH-LIBRARY, Strand.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

ngl.

To the PUBLIC.

THIS Work is intended to supercede the necessity for any other Edition whatever, as it will be calculated to gratify every class of Readers.

The Plan is to print each Play, singly, and entire, from the last revisions of Dr. SAMUEL JOHNSON, and GEORGE STEEVENS, Esq. &c. with their Characters of the Play, and the Origin of the Fable, as an introductory Preface to each Play.

The Plays to be printed on two sorts of paper; the best of which will be superfine writing-post quality, on a new Bourgeois Letter, cast and delicately dressed on purpose.

The First Number is The TEMPEST, beautifully embellished.

The Second Number is MEASURE for MEASURE, ditto.

The Third Number is MACBETH, ditto

The Fourth Number is MUCHADO ABOUT NOTHING, ditto.

The Fifth Number is HAMLET, beautifully embellished.

The Sixth Number is ROMEO and JULIET, ditto.

The Seventh Number is the MERCHANT of VENICE, ditto.

The Eighth Number is the MERRY WIVES of WINDSOR, ditto.

The Ninth Number is JULIUS CÆSAR, ditto.

The Tenth Number is MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM, ditto.

The Eleventh Number is TITUS ANDRONICUS, ditto.

The Twelfth Number is TWELFTH-NIGHT, ditto.

The Thirteenth Number is LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST, ditto.

The Fourteenth Number is TIMON of ATHENS, ditto.

The Fifteenth Number is TROILUS and CRESSIDA, ditto.

The Sixteenth Number is AS YOU LIKE IT, ditto.

The Seventeenth Number is OTHELLO, ditto.

The Eighteenth Number is the COMEDY of ERRORS, ditto.

The Nineteenth Number is KING HENRY V. ditto.

The Twentieth Number is KING LEAR, ditto.

The Twenty-First Number is KING HENRY IV. Part I. ditto.

The Twenty-Second Number is KING HENRY IV. Part II. do.

The Twenty-Third Number is TAMING OF THE SHREW, do.

The Twenty-Fourth Number is CYMBELINE, ditto.

The Twenty-Fifth No. is ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL, do.

The Twenty-Sixth Number is KING HENRY VI. Part I. ditto.

The Twenty-Seventh Number is KING HENRY VI. Part II. do.

The Twenty-Eighth Number is KING HENRY VI. Part III. do.

The Twenty-Ninth Number is KING RICHARD III. ditto,

The Thirtieth Number is KING JOHN, ditto.

The Thirty-First Number is KING HENRY VIII. ditto.

The Thirty-Second Number is KING RICHARD II. ditto.

Thirty-Third Number is The WINTER'S TALE, ditto.

Thirty-Fourth Number is TWO GENTLEMEN of VERONA, do.

The Thirty-Fifth Number is CORIOLANUS, ditto.

The Thirty-Sixth Number is ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, do.

77.

360.

ANNOTATIONS

BY

SAM. JOHNSON & GEO. STEEVENS,

AND

THE VARIOUS COMMENTATORS,

UPON

KING HENRY V.

WRITTEN BY

WILL. SHAKSPERE.

—SIC ITUR AD ASTRA.

VIRG.

L O N D O N :

Printed for, and under the Direction of,

JOHN BELL, British-Library. STRAND,

Bookseller to His Royal Highness the PRINCE of WALES.

M D C C L X X X V I I .

ANNOTATIONS

BY

SAM JOHNSON & GEO. STEPHENS

AND

THE VARIOUS COMMENTATORS

WILL. SHAKSPERE.

—SIC ITUR AD ASTRA—

VIND.

LONDON:

Printed for, and under the Direction of,

JOHN BELL, Bookseller, Strand.

Successor to the Royal Stationer the Printer of Warrants.

M DCC LXXXVII.

ANNOTATIONS
UPON
KING HENRY V.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

ARCHBISHOP CHICHLEY. STEEVEN
John Fordham, consecrated, 1388, died 1426.
REED.

C H O R U S.

1. O for a muse of fire, &c.] This goes upon the notion of the Peripatetick system, which imagines several heavens one above another; the last and highest of which was one of fire. WARBURTON.

A ij

It

ANNOTATIONS
UPON
KING HENRY V.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

ARCHBISHOP CHICHLEY. STEEVEN
John Fordham, consecrated, 1388, died 1426.
REED.

C H O R U S.

1. O for a muse of fire, &c.] This goes upon the notion of the Peripatetick system, which imagines several heavens one above another; the last and highest of which was one of fire. WARBURTON.

A ij

It

It alludes likewise to the aspiring nature of fire, which by its levity, at the separation of the chaos, took the highest seat of all the elements. JOHNSON.

3. ———princes to act,
And monarchs to behold————]

Shakspeare does not seem to set distance enough between the performers and spectators. JOHNSON

7. Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword, and fire,

Crouch for employment.————], In K. Henry VI. “Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire,” are called the three attendants on the English general, Lord Talbot; and, as I suppose, are the dogs of war mentioned in Julius Cæsar.

This image of the warlike Henry very much resembles Montfaucon's description of the Mars discovered at Bresse, who leads a lion and a lioness in couples, and crouching as for employment.

TOLLET.

Warner, in his Albion's England, 1602, speaking of K. Henry V. says:

“He led good fortune in a line, and did but war and win.” Holinshed (p. 567), when the people of Roan petitioned K. Henry V. has put this sentiment into his mouth: “He declared that the goddess of battell, called Bellona, had three hand-maidens, ever of necessitie attending upon her, as blood, fire, and famine.”

STEEVENS.

13. Within this wooden O,——] Nothing shews more more evidently the power of custom over language, than that the frequent use of calling a circle an O, could so much hide the meanness of the metaphor from Shakspeare, that he has used it many times where he makes his most eager attempts at dignity of style.

JOHNSON.

Within this wooden O,——] an allusion to the theatre where this History was exhibited, being, from its circular form, called the globe. The same expression is applied for the like reason, to the world, in Antony and Cleopatra:

A sun and moon which kept their course,
And lighted the little o, the earth.

I know not whether Shakspeare calls the Globe-playhouse a cock-pit, from its being a round building, or else from its serving that purpose also: the latter appears probable, from his styling the floor an unworthy scaffold, which suggests the idea of its being temporary, and that the edifice answered both turns, by means of a slight alteration.

HENLEY.

13. The very casques.] The helmets. JOHNSON.

18. Imaginary forces——] Imaginary for imaginative, or your powers of fancy. Active and passive words are by this author frequently confounded.

JOHNSON.

21. Whose high upreared and abutting fronts

The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder.]

Perilous narrow, in burlesque and common language, meant no more than very narrow. In old books this mode of expression occurs perpetually.

A perilous broad brim to a hat, a perilous long sword, &c. So, in Beaumont and Fletcher's Humorous Lieutenant:

“ She is perilous crafty.”

Thus, villanous is only used to exaggerate, in the Tempest:

“ ———be turn'd to barnacles or apes

“ With foreheads villanous low.”

Again, in John Florio's Preface to his translation of Montaigne:

“ ———in this perilous crook'd passage——.”

STEEVENS.

25. And make imaginary puissance.] This shews that Shakspeare was fully sensible of the absurdity of shewing battles on the theatre, which indeed is never done but tragedy becomes farce. Nothing can be represented to the eye, but by something like it, and within a wood O nothing very like a battle can be exhibited.

JOHNSON.

Other authors of that age seem to have been sensible of the same absurdities. In Heywood's Fair Maid of the West, 1631, a Chorus enters and says,

“ Our stage so lamely can express a sea,

“ That we are forc'd by Chorus to discourse

“ What should have been in action, &c.”

STEEVENS.

28. For 'tis your thoughts, that now must deck our kings.

Carry them here and there;——] We may read read king for kings. The prologue relates only to this single play. The mistake was made by referring them to kings which belongs to thoughts. The sense is, your thoughts must give the king his proper greatness; carry therefore your thoughts here and there, jumping over time, and crowding years into an hour.

JOHNSON.

I am not sure that Dr. Johnson's observation is just. In this play, the king of France as well as England makes his appearance; and the sense may be this;—it must be to your imaginations that our kings are indebted for their royalty. Let the fancy of the spectator furnish out those appendages to greatness which the poverty of our stage is unable to supply.

The poet is still apologizing for the defects of theatrical representation.

STEEVENS.

ACT I.

1. Archbishop of Canterbury.] This first scene was added since the edition of 1608, which is much short of the present editions, wherein the speeches are generally enlarged, and raised: several whole scenes besides, and all the choruses also, were since added by Shakspeare.

POPE.

On this subject a play was written about the time of Shakspeare; but whether before or after his Henry V. made its appearance, has not yet been absolutely determined. (It is thus entered in the books of the Stationer's company. "Tho. Strode, May 2, 1594. A booke entituled the famous Victories of Henry the Fift, containing the honorable Battell of Agincourt." There are two more entries of a play of Henry V. viz. between 1596 and 1615, and one August 14th, 1603.) I have two copies of it in my possession: one without date (which seems much the elder of the two) and another (apparently printed from it) dated 1617, though printed by Bernard Alsop (who was printer of the other edition), and sold by the same person and at the same place. Alsop appears to have been a printer before the year 1600, and was afterwards one of the twenty appointed by decree of the star-chamber to print for this kingdom. I believe, however, this piece to have been prior to that of Shakspeare for several reasons: First, because it is highly probable that it is the very "displeasing play" alluded to in the epilogue to the second part of K. Henry IV.—for Oldcastle died a martyr. Oldcastle is the Falstaff of the piece, which is despicable, and full of ribaldry and impiety from the first scene to the last.—Secondly, because Shakspeare seems to have taken not a few hints from it; for it comprehends in some measure the story of the two parts of Henry IV. as well as of Henry V. and no ignorance, I think, could debase the gold of Shakspeare into such dross, though.
of

though no chemistry but that of Shakspeare could exalt such base metal into gold.—When the Prince of Wales in Henry IV. calls Falstaff my old lad of the Castle, it is probably but a sneering allusion to the deserved fate which this performance met with ; for there is no proof that our poet was ever obliged to change the name of Oldcastle into that of Falstaff, though there is an absolute certainty that this piece must have been condemned by any audience before whom it was ever represented.

Lastly, because it appears (as Dr. Farmer has observed) from the jests of the famous comedian Tarlton, 4to. 1611, that he had been particularly celebrated in the part of the Clown * in Henry V. and though his character does not exist in our play, we find it in the other, which, for the reasons already enumerated, I suppose to have been prior to this.

* Mr. Oldys, in a manuscript note in his copy of Langbaine, says, that Tarlton appeared in the character of the Judge who receives the box on the ear. This Judge is likewise a character in the old play. I may add, on the authority of the books at Stationers-Hall, that Tarlton published what he called his Farewell, a ballad, in Sept. 1588. In Oct. 1589, was entered, "Tarlton's Repentance, and his Farewell to his Friends in his Sickness, a little before his Death ;" in 1590, "Tarlton's Newes out of Purgatorie :" and in the same year, "A pleasaunt Ditty Dialogue-wise, between Tarlton's Ghost and Robyn Goodfellowe."

This

This anonymous play of Henry V. is neither divided into acts or scenes, is uncommonly short, and has all the appearance of having been imperfectly taken down during the representation. As much of it appears to have been omitted, we may suppose that the author did not think it convenient for his reputation to publish a more ample copy.

There is, indeed, a play, called Sir Jahn Oldcastle, published in 1600, with the name of William Shakspeare prefixed to it. The prologue being very short, I shall quote it, as it serves to prove, that a former piece, in which the character of Oldcastle was introduced, had given great offence :

“ The doubtfull title (gentlemen) prefixt
 “ Upon the argument we have in hand,
 “ May breed suspense, and wrongfully disturbe
 “ The peaceful quiet of your settled thoughts :
 “ To stop with scruple, let this breefe suffice.
 “ It is no pamper’d glutton we present,
 “ Nor aged counsellour to youthful sinne ;
 “ But one, whose vertue shone above the rest,
 “ A valiant martyr, and a vertuous peere,
 “ In whose true faith and loyalty exprest
 “ Unto his soveraigne, and his countries weale ;
 “ We strive to pay that tribute of our love
 “ Your favours merit : let faire truth be grac’d, “ Since forg’d invention further time defac’d.

STEEVENS.

4. —the scambling and unquiet time.] In the old old household book of the fifth earl of Northumberland, there is a particular section appointing the order of service for the scambling days in lent, that is, days on which no regular meals were provided, but every one scambled, i. e. scrambled and shifted for himself as well as he could.—So, in the old noted book, entitled, “Leicester’s Commonwealth,” one of the marginal heads is, “Scambling between Leicester and Huntington at the upshot.” Where in the text, the author says, “Hastings, for ought I see, when he cometh to the scambling, is like to have no better luck by the bear [Leicester] then his ancestor had by the boare [K. Richard III.],” edit. 1641, 12mo. p. 87. So, again, Shakspeare himself makes K. Henry V. say to the Princess Katharine, “I get thee with scambling, and thou must therefore prove a good soldier breeder.” Act V.

PERCY.

Shakspeare uses the same word in Much Ado about Nothing,

“Scambling, out-facing, fashion-mong’ring boys.”

Again, in the Merry Devil of Edmonton, 1626 :

“Leave us to scamble for her getting out.”

STEEVENS.

29. Consideration like an angel, &c.] As paradise, when sin and Adam were driven out by the angel, became the habitation of celestial spirits, so the king’s heart, since consideration has driven out his follies, is now the receptacle of wisdom and of virtue.

JOHNSON.

34. Never came reformation in a flood,] Alluding to the method by which Hercules cleansed the famous stables, when he turned a river through them. Hercules still is in our author's head when he mentions the Hydra. JOHNSON.

50. The air, &c.] This line is exquisitely beautiful. JOHNSON.

The same thought occurs in As You Like it, act ii. scene 7.

“——— I must have liberty

“ Withal, as large a charter as the wind,

“ To blow on whom I please.” MALONE.

53. So that the art and practic part of life] The meaning seems to be this. He discourses with so much skill on all subjects, that the art and practice of life must be mistress or teacher of his theorique; that is, that his theory must have been taught by art and practice; which, says he, is strange, since he could see little of the true art or practice among his loose companions, nor ever retired to digest his practice into theory; art is used by the author for practice, as distinguished from science or theory. JOHNSON.

54. —— to this theorique :] Theorick is what terminates in speculation. So, in The Valiant Welchman, 1615.

“ ——— son Caradoc,

“ 'Tis yet unfit, that on this sudden warning

“ You leave your fair wife to the theorique

“ Of matrimonial pleasure and delight.”

Bookish theorique is mentioned in Othello. STEEVENS.

62. The strawberry, &c.] i. e. the wild fruit so called, that grows in the woods. STEEVENS.

68. ———crescive in his faculty.] Increasing in its proper power. JOHNSON.

“Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,

“Unseen, yet crescive in his faculty.”]

“Crescit occulto velut arbor ævo

“Fama Marcelli.”

Crescive is a word used by Drant, in his translation of Horace's Art of Poetry, 1567:

“As lusty youths of crescive age doe flourishe freshe and growe.” STEEVENS.

90. The severals, and unhidden passages,] This line I suspect of corruption, though it may be fairly enough explained: the passages of his titles are the lines of succession by which his claims descend. Unhidden is open, clear. JOHNSON.

105. ———good Uncle.] John Holland, duke of Exeter, was married to Elizabeth the king's aunt.

STEEVENS.

106. Shall we call in, &c.] Here began the old play. POPE.

107. Not yet, my cousin, &c.] The quarto, 1600 and 1608, read,

“Not yet, my cousin; till we be resolv'd

“Of some serious matters touching us and France.”

STEEVENS.

109. ———task———] Keep busied with scruples and laborious disquisitions. JOHNSON.

119. Or nicely charge your understanding soul] Take heed, lest by nice and subtle sophistry you burthen your knowing soul, or knowingly burthen your soul, with the guilt of advancing a false title, or of maintaining, by spacious fallacies, a claim which, if shewn in its native and true colours, would appear to be false. JOHNSON.

120. —miscreate,—] Ill-begotten, illegitimate, spurious. JOHNSON.

123. —in approbation.] i. e. in proving and supporting that title which shall be now set up. So, in Brathwaite's Survey of Histroies, 1614, "Composing what he wrote, not by report of others, but by the approbation of his own eyes." Again, in the Winter's Tale:

"That lack'd sight only;—nought for approbation

"But only seeing." MALONE.

125. —take heed how you impawn our person,] The whole drift of the king is to impress upon the archbishop a due sense of the caution with which he is to speak. He tells him that the crime of unjust war, if the war be unjust, shall rest upon him.

"Therefore take heed how you impawn your person." So, I think, it should be read, Take heed how you pledge yourself, your honour, your happiness, in support of bad advice.

Dr. Warburton explains impawn by engage, and so escapes the difficulty. JOHNSON.

The

The allusion here is to the game of chess, and the disposition of the pawns with respect to the King, at the commencement of this mimetick contest. HENLEY.

132. ———brief mortality.]

“Nulla brevem dominum sequetur.” Hor.

STEEVENS.

133. Under this conjuration,——] The quartos, 1600 and 1608, read,

“After this conjuration.”

STEEVENS.

139. ———There is no bar, &c.] This whole speech is copied (in a manner verbatim) from Hall’s Chronicle, Henry V. year the second, folio 4. xx. xxx. xl. &c. In the first edition it is very imperfect, and the whole history and names of the princes are confounded; but this was afterwards set right, and corrected from his original, Hall’s Chronicle. POPE.

142. This speech (together with the Latin passage in it) may as well be said to be taken from Holinshed as from Hall. STEEVENS.

144. ———gloze] Expound, explain, and sometimes comment upon. So, in Troilus and Cressida:

“———you have both said well;

“And on the cause and question now in hand

“Have gloz’d but superficially.” REED.

176. To fine his title, &c.] This is the reading of the quarto of 1608, that of the folio is, To find his title.

I believe that find is right; the jury finds for the plaintiff, or finds for the defendant: to find his title is, to determine in favour of his title with some shew of truth.

JOHNSON.

Both the quartos, 1600 and 1608, read—To fine his title, i. e. to make it shewy or spacious by some appearance of justice.

STEEVENS.

178. ————the lady Lingare,

Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son

To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son

Of Charles the Great.] But Charlemain and

Charles the Great were one and the same person. Charlemaigne was indeed the son of Lewis the emperor; but who the lady Lingare was, hath not been discovered. Shakspeare, however, gives the information just as he found it in Hall and Holinshed.

REMARKS.

181. ————Also king Lewis the ninth,] The word ninth has been inserted by some of the modern editors. The old copies read tenth. Ninth is certainly wrong, and tenth certainly right. Isabel was the wife of Philip the second, father of Lewis the ninth, and grandfather of Lewis the tenth.

REMARKS.

198. ————imbare their crooked titles,] Mr. Pope reads: Than openly embrace; But where is the antithesis betwixt hide in the preceding line, and imbrace in this? The two old folios read, Than amply to imbarre.—We must certainly read, as Mr. Warburton advised me, Than amply to imbare—lay open, display to view. I am surpriz'd Mr. Pope did not start this conjecture, as Mr. Rowe had led the way to it in his edition; who reads:

Than

“Than amply to make bare their crooked titles.”

THEOBALD.

Mr. Theobald might have found, in the quarto of 1608, this reading:

“Than amply to embrace their crooked causes;” out of which line Mr. Pope formed his reading, erroneous indeed, but not merely capricious. JOHNSON.

The quarto 1600, reads—imbace

I know of no such word as imbare. To unbar is to open, which I suppose to be the word set down by the poet, and was probably opposed to bar. So, in the first scene of Timon, the poet says,

“I’ll unbolt to you.”

To embar, however, seems, from the following passage in the first book of Stanyhurst’s translation of Virgil, 1582, to signify to break or cut off abruptly:

“Heere Venus embarring his tale,” &c.

Yet, as to bar, in Much Ado about Nothing, is to strengthen,——

“——that is stronger made

“Which was before barr’d up with ribs of iron.”

So, amply to unbar, may mean to weaken by an open display of invalidity. STEEVENS.

Imbare is, I believe, the true reading, and means no more than to bare or lay upon. It is formed like impaint, impawn, and many other words used by Shakspeare. MALONE.

218. ——cold for action!] The next speeches of Ely, Exeter, Westmoreland, and Canterbury, were added after the quartos 1600 and 1608. STEEVENS.

244. They of those marches,—] The marches are the borders, the limits, the confines. Hence the Lords Marchers, i. e. the Lords Presidents of the marches, &c. So in the first canto of Drayton's Baron's Wars:

“When now the marchers well upon their way,” &c. STEEVENS.

249. —giddy neighbour—] i. e. inconstant, changeable. JOHNSON.

251. Never went with his forces into France,] The quartos 1600 and 1608, read, “—never my great grandfather

“Unmask'd his power for France—”

What an opinion the Scots entertained of the defenceless state of England, may be known by the following passage from The Battle of Flodden, an ancient historical poem:

“For England's king you understand

“To France is past with all his peers;

“There is none at home left in the land,

“But joul't-headed monks, and bursten freers.

“Of ragged rustics, without rules,

“Of priests prating for pudding shives;

“Of milners madder than their mules,

“Or wanton clerks, waking their wives.”

STEEVENS.

258. —at the ill neighbourhood.] The quartos 1600 and 1608 read;

—at the bruit thereof.

STEEVENS.

259 —fear'd—] i. e. frightened. MALONE.

269.

269. ———and sumless treasuries.] The quartos 1600 and 1608 read,

“ ———and shipless treasury. STEEVENS.

271. If that you will France win, &c.] Hall's Chronicle. Henry V. year 2. fol. 7. p. 2. x. POPE.

It is likewise found in Hollinshed, and in the old anonymous play of K. Henry V. STEEVENS.

279. Yet that is but a curs'd necessity;] A curs'd necessity means only an unfortunate necessity. Curs'd, in colloquial phrase, signifies any thing unfortunate. So we say, such a one leads a cursed life; another has got into a cursed scrape. It may mean, a necessity to be execrated.

The vulgarism is often used by Sir Arthur Georges in his translation of Lucan, 1614. So, B. vii. p. 293.

“ His curs'd fortune he condemned.”

Again, p. 297:

“ ———on the cruel destinies

“ The people pour out cursed cries.”

Again, in Chapman's translation of the 5th Odyssey:

“ ———while thus discoursed he held,

“ A curs'd surge 'gainst a cutting rock impell'd

“ His naked body.” STEEVENS.

281. And pretty traps——] Thus the old copy; but I believe we should read petty. STEEVENS.

284. For government, though high, and low, and lower,] The foundation and expression of this thought seems to be borrowed from Cicero de Republica, lib. 2. Sic ex summis & mediis & infimis inter- jectis

jectis ordinibus, ut sonis, moderatam ratione civitatem, consensu dissimiliorum concinere; & quæ harmonia à musicis dicitur in cantu, eam esse in civitate concordiam.

THEOBALD.

285. ———in one consent;] Consent is unison.

STEEVENS.

290. Setting endeavour in continual motion;

To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,

Obedience:—] Neither the sense nor construction of this passage is very obvious. The construction is, endeavour, ———as an aim or butt to which endeavour, obedience is fixed. The sense is, that all endeavour is to terminate in obedience, to be subordinate to the publick good and general design of government.

JOHNSON.

295. They have a king and officers of sort:] The quarto of 1600 reads, I think rightly, ———officers of sort; i. e. of rank or quality.

MALONE.

Officers of sort means officers of different degrees. In a London haberdasher's bill to his customer in the country, I lately saw the following charge, "To thread of sorts," i. e. of different kinds.

STEEVENS.

304. The civil citizens kneading up the honey;] The bees do in fact knead the wax more than the honey, but that Shakspeare perhaps did not know.

JOHNSON.

The old quartos read—lading up the honey.

STEEVENS.

308. Delivering o'er to executors pale

The lazy yawning drone, ———] Executors is here used for executioners.

MALONE.

319. Without defeat.—] The quartos 1600 and 1608 read, Without defect. STEEVENS.

332. —emperry,] This word, which signifies dominion, is now obsolete, though formerly in general use. So, in Claudius Tiberius Nero, 1607:

“Within the circuit of our emperry.” STEEVENS.

339. —with a waxen epitaph.] The quarto 1608 reads, with a paper epitaph.

Either a waxen or a paper epitaph, is an epitaph easily obliterated or destroyed; one which can confer no lasting honour on the dead. Shakspeare employs the former epithet in a similar sense in K. Richard II.

“That it may enter Mowbray’s waxen coat.”
Again in G. Whetstone’s Garden of Unthriftiness, 1576:

“In waxe, say I, men easily grave their will;

“In marble stone the worke with paine is wonne:

“But perfect once, the print remaineth still,

“When waxen seales by every browse are donne.”

STEEVENS.

The second reading is more unintelligible, to me at least, than the other: a grave not dignified with the slightest memorial. JOHNSON.

359. —a nimble galliard won;] A galliard was an ancient dance, now obsolete. So, in All for Money, 1574:

“Where shall we get a pipe to play the devil a galliard.” STEEVENS.

Mr.

Mr. Reed hath cited the following description of a Galliard, from Sir J. Davis's Orchestra :

“ But for more diverse and more pleasing show,
 “ A swift and wand’ring dance she did invent,
 “ With passages uncertain to and fro,
 “ Yet with uncertain answer and consent
 “ To the quick music of the instrument.
 “ Five was the number of the music’s feet,
 “ Which still the dance did with five paces meet,
 “ A gallant dance that lively doth bewray
 “ A spirit and a virtue masculine,
 “ Impatient that her house on earth should stay,
 “ Since she herself is fiery and divine :
 “ Oft doth she of her body upward fine ;
 “ With lofty turns and caprioles in the air,
 “ Which with the lusty tunes accorded fair.”

366. Tennis balls, my liege.] In the old play of Henry V. already mentioned, this present consists of a gilded tun of tennis-balls and a carpet. STEEVENS.

367. We are glad, the dauphin is so pleasant with us ;] Thus stands the answer of K. Henry in the same old play :

“ Mylord, prince Dolphin is very pleasant with me.
 “ But tell him, that instead of balls of leather,
 “ We will toss him balls of brass and of iron ;
 “ Yea, such balls as never were toss’d in France.
 “ The proudest tennis-court in France shall rue it.”

And

And the following passage is in Michael Drayton's Battle of Agincourt:

“ I'll send him balls and rackets if I live,
 “ That they such racket shall in Paris see,
 “ When over line with bandies I shall drive ;
 “ As that, before the set be fully done,
 “ France may perhaps into the hazard run.”

STEEVENS.

374. Chace is a term at tennis. JOHNSON.

So is the hazard; a place in the tennis-court into which the ball is sometimes struck. STEEVENS.

378. And therefore, living hence,——] Living hence means withdrawing from the court, the place in which he is now speaking. STEEVENS.

384. For that I have laid by——] To qualify myself for this undertaking, I have descended from my station, and studied the arts of life in a lower character. JOHNSON.

The quartos 1600 and 1608 read—for this.

STEEVENS.

390. ——his balls to gun-stones ;——] When ordnance was first used, they discharged balls, not of iron, but of stone. JOHNSON.

So, Hollinshed, p. 947. ‘ About seven of the clocke marched forward the light pieces of ordnance, with stone and powder.’

IN the BRUT of ENGLAND it is said that when Henry the fifth before Hareflete received a taunting message from the Dauphin of France, and a ton of tennis-tennis-balls by way of contempt, “he anone lette “make tenes balles for the Dolfin (Henry’s ship) in “all the haste that they myght and they were great “GONNESTONES for the Dolfin to playe with alle.

 “But this game at tennis was too rough for the be“sieged when Henry playede at the tenes with his “harde GONNESTONES,” &c. STEEVENS.

ACT II.

Line 1. NOW all the youth of England—] I have replaced this chorus here, by the authority of the old folios; and ended the first act, as the poet certainly intended. Mr. Pope removed it, because, says he, “This chorus manifestly is intended to advertise the spectators of the change of the scene to Southampton; and therefore ought to be placed just before that change, and not here.” It is true, the spectators are to be informed, that, when they next see the king, they are to suppose him at Southampton. But this does not imply any necessity of this chorus being contiguous to that change. On the contrary, the very including lines vouch absolutely against it:

“But till the king come forth, and not till then,

“Unto Southampton do we shift our scene.”

For

For how absurd is such a notice, if the scene is to change so soon as ever the chorus quits the stage? Besides, unless this chorus be prefixed to the scene betwixt Nym, Bardolph, &c. we shall draw the poet into another absurdity. Pistol, Nym and Bardolph, are in this scene talking of going to the wars of France; but the king had but just, at his quitting the stage, declared his resolution of commencing this war: and without the interval of an act, betwixt the scene and the comick characters entering, how could they with any probability be informed of this intended expedition?

THEOBALD.

I think Mr. Pope mistaken in transposing this chorus, and Mr. Theobald in concluding the act with it. The chorus evidently introduces that which follows, not comments on that which precedes, and therefore rather begins than ends the act, and so I have printed it. Dr. Warburton follows Mr. Pope. JOHNSON.

8. For now sits Expectation in the air;

And hides a sword, from hilts unto the point,

With crowns imperial, &c.] The imagery is wonderfully fine, and the thought exquisite. Expectation sitting in the air designs the height of their ambition; and the sword hid from the hilt to the point with crowns and coronets, that all sentiments of danger were lost in the thoughts of glory.

WARBURTON.

The idea is taken from the ancient representations of trophies in tapestry or painting. Among these it is very common to see swords encircled with naval or mural crowns. Expectation is likewise personified by Milton. Par. Lost. b. vi.

“———while Expectation stood

“In horror.”———

STEEVENS.

In the horse armoury in the Tower of London, Edward III. is represented with two crowns on his sword, alluding to the two kingdoms, France and England, of both which he was crowned heir. Perhaps the poet took the thought from this representation.

TOLLET.

26. ——the gilt of France——] Gilt, which in our author generally signifies a display of gold (as in this play,

“Our gayness and our gilt are all besmirch’d”) in the present instance means golden money. So, in An Alarum for London, 1602:

“To spend the victuals of our citizens,

“Which we can scarcely compass now with gilt.”

STEEVENS.

28. And by their hands this grace of kings must die
(If hell and treason hold their promises,)

Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton,

Linger your patience on; and well digest

The abuse of distance, while we force a play.

The sum is paid; the traitors are agreed;

The king is set from London; and the scene

Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton:

There is the play-house now.——] I suppose every one that reads these lines looks about for a meaning meaning which he cannot find. There is no connection of sense nor regularity of transition from one thought to the other. It may be suspected that some lines are lost, and in that case the sense is irretrievable. I rather think, the meaning is obscured by an accidental transposition, which I would reform thus :

And by their hands this grace of kings must die,

If hell and treason hold their promises.

The sum is paid, the traitors are agreed,

The king is set from London, and the scene

Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton,

Ere he take ship for France. And in Southampton

Linger your patience on, and well digest

The abuse of distance, while we force a play.

There is the play-house now——

This alteration restores sense, and probably the true sense. The lines might be otherwise ranged, but this order pleases me best. JOHNSON.

23. ——this grace of kings——] Shakspeare might have found this phrase in Chapman's translation of the first book of Homer, 1598 :

“ ——with her the grace of kings,

“ Wise Ithacus ascended——”

Again, in the 24th book :

“ Idæus, guider of the mules, discern'd this grace of men.” STEEVENS.

31. ——well digest] The folio, in which only these choruses are found, reads, and perhaps rightly, ——we'll digest. STEEVENS.

32. ———while we———] These two words have been added by the modern editors, and (as it should seem) very properly. To force a play, is to produce a play by compelling many circumstance into a narrow compass. STEEVENS.

38. ———charming the narrow seas] Though Ben Jonson was indebted, as we are told, to the kindness of Shakspeare for the introduction of his first piece, Every Man in his Humour, on the stage, and though our author had performed a part in it, Jonson in the prologue to that play, as in many other places, has endeavoured to ridicule and depretiate him :

“ He rather prays you will be pleased to see

“ One such to-day as other plays should be,

“ Where neither chorus wafts you o’er the seas,” &c.

When this prologue was written is unknown. The envious author of it, however, did not publish it till 1616, the year of Shakspeare’s death. MALONE.

40. We’ll not offend one stomach———] i. e. you shall pass the sea without the qualms of sea sickness.

JOHNSON.

41. But ’till the king come forth,———] Here seems to be something omitted. Sir T. Hanmer reads :

“ But when the king comes forth,——— which, as the passage now stands, is necessary. These lines, obscure as they are, refute Mr. Pope’s conjectures on the true place of the chorus ; for they shew that something is to intervene before the scene changes to Southampton.

JOHNSON.

The

The Canons of Criticism read :

“ ————and but till then.”

And the Revisal approves the correction. STEEVENS.

43. Bard. Well met, corporal.] I have already shewn why in this edition the act begins with the chorus.

JOHNSON.

44. ————lieutenant Bardolph.] At this scene begins the connection of this play with the latter part of K. Henry IV. The characters would be indistinct, and the incidents unintelligible, without the knowledge of what passed in the two foregoing plays. JOHNSON.

48. ————there shall be smiles ;——] It is in vain to seek the precise meaning of every whimsical expression employed by this eccentric character. Nym, however, having expressed his indifference about the continuance of Pistol's friendship, might have added, when time serves there shall be smiles, i. e. he should be merry, even though he was to lose it ; or that his face would be ready with a smile as often as occasion should call one out into service, though Pistol, who had excited so many, was no longer near him. Dr. Farmer, however, with great probability would read——smites, i. e, blows, a word used in the midland counties.

STEEVENS.

53. ————the humour of it.] The folio reads,—and there's an end.

STEEVENS.

55. ————and we'll all be sworn brothers to France :] We should read, we'll all go sworn brothers to France, or, we'll all be sworn brothers in France. JOHNSON.

The humour of sworn brothers should be open'd a little. In the times of adventure, it was usual for two chiefs to bind themselves to share in each other's fortune, and divide their acquisitions between them. So, in the Conqueror's expedition, Robert de Oily, and Roger de Ivery, were fratres jurati; and Robert gave one of the honours he received to his sworn brother Roger. So these three scoundrels set out for France, as if they were going to make a conquest of the kingdom.

WHALLEY.

67. ———patience be a tir'd mare——] The folio reads, by corruption, tired name! from which Sir Thomas Hanmer, sagaciously enough, derived tired dame. Mr. Theobald retrieved from the quarto tired mare, the true reading.

JOHNSON.

———though patience be a tir'd mare, yet she will plod.] So, in Pierce's Supererogation, or a New Praise of the Old Asse, &c. "Silence is a slave in a chaine, and patience the common packhorse of the world."

STEEVENS.

73. Base tyke,——] Tyke is a small kind of dog.

STEEVENS.

85. ———prick-ear'd cur] "There were newly come "to the citie two young men that were Romans which "ranged up and downe the streetes with their ears upright."——Painters Palace of Pleasure. This is said of two sharpers, and seems to explain the term prick-ear'd.

HENDERSON.

89. Will you shog off?——] This cant word is used in Beaumont and Fletcher's Coxcomb:

"Come,

“Come, prythee, let us shog off.”

Again, in Pasquil and Katherine, 1601 :

“——thus it shogges,” i. e. thus it goes.

STEEVENS.

93. ——in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy.] Such was the coarse language in use among vulgar brawlers. So, in the Life and Death of William Summers, &c.

“——Thou lyest in thy throat, and in thy guts.”

STEEVENS.

94. ——thy nasty mouth!] The quartos read :

——messful mouth,

STEEVENS.

98. I am not Barbason ; you cannot conjure me.] Barbason is the name of a dæmon mentioned in the Merry Wives of Windsor.

STEEVENS.

105. ——doating death is near ;] The quarto has groaning death.

JOHNSON.

106. Therefore exhale] Exhale, I believe, here signifies draw, or in Pistol's language, lug out.

The stage direction in the old copy, which ought to be preserved [they drawe], confirms this explanation.

MALONE.

Therefore exhale] means only—therefore die ; a threat common enough among dramattick heroes of a higher rank than Pistol, who only expresses this idea in the fantastick language peculiar to his character.

STEEVENS.

119. ——the lazar kite of Cressid's kind,] The same expression occurs in Green's Card of Fancy,

1601 :

1601: "What courtesy is to be found in such kites of Cressides kind?"

Again, in Gascoigne's Dan Bartholomew of Bathe, 1587:

"Nor seldom seene in kites of Cressides kinde."

Shakspeare might design a ridicule on the last of these passages."

STEEVENS.

122. ————— there's enough: go to.]

The first folio reads,—there's enough to go to.

STEEVENS.

138. Base is the slave that pays.] Perhaps this expression was proverbial. I meet with it in The fair Maid of the West, by Heywood, 1631:

"My motto shall be, Base is the man that pays."

STEEVENS.

180. that was his bedfellow,] So, Holinshed, "The said Lord Scroop was in such favour with the King, that he admitted him sometime to be his bedfellow." The familiar appellation of bedfellow, which appears strange to us, was common among the ancient nobility. There is a letter from the sixth Earl of Northumberland (still preserved in the collection of the present Duke) addressed "To his beloved cousyn Thomas Arundel, &c." which begins, "Bedfellow, after my most hartee recommendation:" So, in a comedy called A Knack to know a Knave, 1594:

"Yet, for thou wast once bedfellow to a king."

"And that I lov'd thee as my second self," &c.

Again, in Look about You, 1600:

"—————if

“ —————if I not err

“ Thou art the prince’s ward.—

“ —————I am his ward, his chamberlain and bedfellow.” Again, in Cynthia’s Revenge, 1613:

“ Her I’ll bestow, and without prejudice,

“ On thee alone, my noble bedfellow.”

STEEVENS.

181. —cloy’d and grac’d—] Thus the quarto; the folio reads—dull’d and cloy’d. Perhaps dull’d is a mistake for dol’d. STEEVENS.

183. —to death and treachery!] Here the quartos insert a line omitted in all the following editions.

Exet. O! the Lord of Marsham! JOHNSON.

184. Now sits the wind fair—] The quarto of 1600 reads—Now, Sirs, the wind is fair—which may be right. MALONE.

190. For which we have in head assembled them?] Head, for an army formed. JOHNSON.

203. —hearts create—] Hearts compounded or made up, of duty and zeal. JOHNSON.

215. —more advice.—] On his return to more coolness of mind. JOHNSON.

225. —proceeding on distemper.] It has been just said by the King that, it was excess of wine that set him on, and distemper may therefore mean intoxication. Dis- temper’d in liquor, is still a common expression. Chapman, in his epicedium on the Death of Prince Henry, 1612, has personified this distemper:

“ Frantick distemper, and hare-ey’d unrest.”

And

And Brabantio says, that Roderigo is :

“ Full of supper and distemp’ring draughts.”

Again, Holinshed, Vol. III. p. 626, “—gave him wine and strong drink in such excessive sort, that he was therewith distemper’d, and reel’d as he went.”

STEEVENS.

226. ———how shall we stretch our eye,——] If we may not wink at small faults, how wide must we open our eyes at great ?

JOHNSON.

251. ———quick——] i. e. living. JOHNSON.

275. ———though the truth of it stand off as grass As black from white,——] Though the truth be as apparent and visible as black and white contiguous to each other. ‘To stand off is être relevé, to be prominent to the eye, as the strong parts of a picture.

JOHNSON.

277. Treason, and Murder,——] What follows to the end of this speech is additional since the first edition.

POPE.

279. Working so grossly——] Grossly for palpably ; with a plain and visible connexion of cause and effect.

JOHNSON.

286. And other devils, that suggest, &c.] The reasoning, I think, requires that we should read——
For other devils——

MALONE.

290. ———he, that temper’d thee,——] Though temper’d may stand for formed or moulded, yet I fancy tempted was the author’s word, for it answers better to suggest in the opposition.

JOHNSON.

Temper’d

Temper'd, I believe, is the true reading. Falstaff says of Shallow, that he has him “tempering between his thumb and finger.” STEEVENS.

Dr. Johnson’s emendation is strongly supported, not only by the word suggest, which he has mentioned, but likewise by the foregoing and subsequent lines :

“ And whatsoever cunning fiend it was

“ That wrought upon the——

“ If that same dæmon that hath gull’d thee thus.”

MALONE.

Surely, the word wrought, if this citation contains any proof, agrees better with tempered than tempted.

HENLEY.

295. ——vasty Tartar——] i. e. Tartarus, the fabled place of future punishment. So, in Heywood’s Brazen Age, 1613 :

“ With Aconitum that in Tartar springs.”

STEEVENS.

298. Oh, how hast thou with jealousy infected

The sweetness of affiance !——] Shakspeare urges this aggravation of the guilt of treachery with great judgment. One of the worst consequences of breach of trust is the diminution of that confidence which makes the happiness of life, and the dissemination of suspicion, which is the poison of society.

JOHNSON.

306. Garnish’d and deck’d in modest complement.]

Complement has in this instance the same sense as in Love’s Labour’s Lost, Act I. Complements in the age of Shakspeare, Shakspeare, meant the same as accomplishments in the present one. STEEVENS.

307. Not working with the eye without the ear.]

The king means to say of Scroop, that he was a cautious man, who knew that frontis nulla fides, that a specious appearance was deceitful, and therefore did not work with the eye without the ear, did not trust the air or look of any man till he had tried him by enquiry and conversation. Surely this is the character of a prudent man. JOHNSON.

309. —and so finely boulded, didst thou seem:]

i. e. refined or purged from all faults. POPE.

Boulded is the same with sifted, and has consequently the meaning of refined. JOHNSON.

327. For me—the gold of France did not seduce;]

Holinshed, p. 549, observes from Hall, that “diverse write, that Richard earle of Cambridge did not conspire with the Lord Scroope, and Thomas Graie, for the murthering of King Henrie, to please the French king withall, but onlie to the intent to exalt to the crowne his brother-in-law Edmund, Earl of March, as heire to Lionell Duke of Clarence: after the death of which Earl of March, for diverse secret impediments not able to have issue, the Earl of Cambridge was sure that the crowne should come to him by his wife, and to his children of her begotten. And therefore (as was thought) he rather confessed himselfe for neede of monie to be corrupted by the French king, than he would declare his inward mind, &c.”

STEEVENS.

337. My fault,—] One of the conspirators against Queen Elizabeth, I think Parry, concludes his letter to her with these words, “discharge me; a culpâ, but not a pœnâ, good lady.” This letter was much read at that time, and the author doubtless copied it.

This whole scene was much enlarged and improved after the first edition; the particular insertions it would be tedious to mention, and tedious without any use.

JOHNSON.

349. —Get you therefore hence,] So, in Holinshed; “—Get ye hence therefore, ye poor miserable wretches, to the receiving of your just reward: wherein God’s majesty give you grace,” &c.

STEEVENS.

365. No king of England, if not of France.] So in the old play before that of Shakspeare:

“If not king of France, then of nothing must I be king.”

STEEVENS.

366. —let me bring thee to Staines.] i. e. let me attend thee.

375. —finer end,] for final.

JOHNSON.

377. —turning o’ the tide]— It has been a very old opinion, which Mead, de imperio solis, quotes, as if he believed it, that nobody dies but in the time of ebb: half the deaths in London confute the notion; but we find that it was common among the women of the poet’s time.

JOHNSON.

378. —fumble with the sheets,—] This passage is

D

burlesqued

burlesqued by Beaumont and Fletcher, in, The Captain :

“ 1. How does my master ?

“ 2. Faith, he lies drawing on apace,

“ 1. That’s an ill sign.

“ 2. And fumbles with the pots too.

“ 1. Then there’s no way but one with him.”

In the spurious play of King John, 1611, when Faulconbridge sees that prince at the point of death, he says :

“ O piercing sight ! he fumbleth in the mouth,

“ His speech doth fail.”——

And Pliny in his chapter on The Signes of Death, makes mention of “ a fumbling and pleiting of the bed-cloths.” See P. Holland’s Translation, chap. li.

STEEVENS.

There is this expression, and not, I believe, designed as a sneer on Shakspeare, in Beaumont and Fletcher’s Spanish Curate, Act IV. sc. 5.

“ A glimmering before death, ’tis nothing else
Sir ;

“ Do you see how he fumbles with the sheet ?”

WHALLEY.

The same indication of approaching death is enumerated by Celsus Lommius, Hippocrates, and Galen. The testimony of the latter is sufficient to shew, that such a symptom is by no means imaginary.

“ Manus ante faciem attollere, muscas quasi venari inani

inani operâ, floccos carpere de vestibus, vel pariete. Et in seipso hoc expertus fuit Galenus. Quum enim," &c. Van Swieten Comm. t. ii. sect. 708. COLLINS.

380. I knew there was but one way;] I believe this phrase is proverbial. I meet with it again in, If you know not me, you know Nobody, 1613:

"I heard the doctors whisper it in secret

"There is no way but one,"

Again, in the Life and death of Gomaliel Ratsey, 1605:

"But now the courtier is in Huckster's handling, there is no way with him but one, for Ratsey seizes both on his money and books." STEEVENS.

—for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and a table of green fields,] These words, and a table of green-fields, are not to be found in the old editions of 1600, and 1608. This nonsense got into all the following editions by a pleasant mistake of the stage editors, who printed from the common piece-meal written parts in the play-house. A table was here directed to be brought in (it being a scene in a tavern where they drink at parting), and this direction crept into the text from the margin. Greenfield was the name of the property-man in that time, who furnished implements, &c. for the actors, A table of Greenfield's.

POPE.

So reasonable an account of this blunder, Mr. Theobald would not acquiesce in. He thought, a table of Greenfield's part of the text, only corrupted, and that it should be read, he babbled of green fields;

D ij

because because men do so in the ravings of a calenture. But he did not consider how ill this agrees with the nature of the knight's illness, who was now in no babbling humour; and so far from wanting cooling in green fields, that his feet were cold, and he just expiring.

WARBURTON.

Upon this passage Mr. Theobald has a note that fills a page, which I omit in pity to my readers, since he only endeavours to prove, what I think every reader perceives to be true, that at this time no table could be wanted. Mr. Pope, in an appendix to his own edition in 12mo, seems to admit Theobald's emendation, which we would have allowed to be uncommonly happy, had we not been prejudiced against it by Mr. Pope's first note, with which, as it excites merriment, we are loath to part. JOHNSON.

Had the former editors been apprized, that table, in our author, signifies a pocket-book, I believe they would have retained it, with the following alteration; for his nose was as sharp as a pen upon a table of green fells.—On table books, silver or steel pens, very sharp pointed, were formerly, and are still fixed to the backs or covers. Mother Quickly compares Falstaff's nose (which in dying persons grows thin and sharp) to one of those pens, very properly, and she meant probably to have said, on a table book with a shagreen cover, or shagreen table; but in her usual blundering way, she calls it a table of green fells, or a table covered with green-skin, which the blundering transcriber turned into into green-fields, and our editors have turned the prettiest blunder in Shakspeare quite out of doors.

SMITH.

Green fells and green fields might anciensly have had the same meaning. So, in the Countess of Pembroke's Tragedie of Antonie, 1595, 12mo.

“ As juice of Tyrian shell,

“ When clarified well,

“ To wolle of finest fields

“ A purple glosse it yields.”

STEEVENS.

Of these different attempts at emendation Theobald's is by far the best, as it comes nearest to the traces of the letters: but yet babbling seems to have been an unlikely employment for Falstaff, in so weak a condition. Robinson, in his translation of Sir T. More's Utopia, hath used the word iabel for one who talks incoherently, and at random: hence I am induced to suspect that the true reading is a iabled. The similarity, in the writing of the time, between the letters h and n might easily have occasioned the mistake of one for the other, though they had been less similar in sound, and especially in the mouth of Dame Quickly. Dr. Johnson (though he hath erred in his explanation of the verb) hath given in his dictionary, to javel and to jable, as one.

HENLEY.

384. — now I, to comfort him, bade him a should not think of God:] Perhaps Shakspeare was indebted to the following story in Wits, Fits and Fancies, &c. 1595, for this very characteristick exhortation: “ A gentlewoman

D iij

gentlewoman fearing to be drowned, said, now Jesu receive our soules ! Soft, mistress, answered the waterman, I trowe we are not come to that passe yet."

MALONE.

390. ———cold as any stone.] Such is the end of Ealstaff, from whom Shakspeare had promised us in his epilogue to Henry IV. that we should receive more entertainment. It happened to Shakspeare, as to other writers, to have his imagination crowded with a tumultuary confusion of images, which, while they were yet unsorted and unexamined, seemed sufficient to furnish a long train of incidents, and a new variety of merriment ; but which, when he was to produce them to view, shrunk suddenly from him, or could not be accommodated to his general design. That he once designed to have brought Falstaff on the scene again, we know from himself ; but whether he could contrive no train of adventures suitable to his character, or could match him with no companions likely to quicken his humour, or could open no new vein of pleasantry, and was afraid to continue the same strain, lest it should not find the same reception, he has here for ever discarded, and made haste to dispatch him, perhaps for the same reason for which Addison killed Sir Roger, that no other hand might attempt to exhibit him.

Let meaner authors learn from this example, that it is dangerous to sell the bear which is yet not hunted ; to promise to the public what they have not written.

This

This disappointment probably inclined Queen Elizabeth to command the poet to produce him once again, and to shew him in love or courtship. This was, indeed, a new source of humour, and produced a new play from the former characters. JOHNSON.

396. Mrs. Quickly blunders here, mistaking the word incarnate for a colour. In Questions of Love 1566, we have, “Yelowē, pale, redde, blue, whyte. graye, and incarnate.” HENDERSON.

413. Let senses rule;—] This evidently means, let prudence govern you, conduct yourself sensibly; and it agrees with what precedes and what follows.

STEEVENS.

—Pitch and pay ;] The caution was a very proper one to Mrs. Quickly, who had suffered before, by letting Falsaff run in her debt. The same expression occurs in Blurt Master Constable :

“ I will commit you, Signior, to my house ; but will you pitch and pay, or will your worship run——”

So, again in Herod and Antipater, 1622 :

“ ——he that will purchase this,

“ Must pitch and pay.”

Again, in The Mastive, an ancient collection of epigrams :

“ ——Susan when she first bore sway,

“ Had for one night a French crown, pitch and pay.” STEEVENS.

Old Tusser, in his description of Norwich, tells us it is

“ A city trim——

“ Where

“Where strangers well, may seeme to dwell,

“That pitch and paie, or keep their daye.”

John Florio says, “Pitch and paie, and go your waie.”

One of the old laws of Blackwell-hall was, “that a penny be paid by the owner of every bale of cloth for pitching,”

FARMER.

417. Therefore, caveto be thy counsellor.] The old quartos read :

Therefore Cophetua be thy counsellor. STEEVENS.

418. ———clear thy crystals.—] Dry thine eyes.

JOHNSON.

So, in The Gentleman Usher, by Chapman, 1602 :

“————an old wife’s eye

“Is a blue chrystal full of sorcery.”

Again, in A Match at Midnight, 1633 :

“————ten thousand Cupids

“Methought sat playing on that pair of chrystals.”

Again, in The Double Marriage, by Beaumont and Fletcher :

“————sleep, you sweet glasses,

“An everlasting slumber close those chrystals.”

The old quartos 1600 and 1608, read :

Clear up thy crystals.

STEEVENS.

425. ———keep close,——] The quartos 1600, and 1608, read, ————keep fast thy buggle boe.

Which certainly is not nonsense, as the same expression is used by Shirley, in his Gentleman of Venice :

“————the courtisans of Venice,

“ Shall

“ Shall keep their bugle bowes for thee, dear uncle.”

Perhaps, indeed it is a Scotch term ; for in Ane verie excellent and delectible Treatise intitult Philotus, &c. printed at Edinburgh, 1603, I find it again :

“ What reck to tak the bogill bo,

“ My bonie burd, for anes.”

The reader may suppose buggle boe to be just what he pleases. STEEVENS.

The following lines in the Devil's Charter, a tragedy, by Barnaby Barnes, 1607, may perhaps assist the reader in his conjectures :

“ I conjure thee, foul fiend of Acheron,

“ By puissant Hobblecock, and Bristletoe,

“ By Windicaper, Monti-boggle-bo——.”

MALONE.

430. And more than carefully it us concerns.] More than carefully, is with more than common care; a phrase of the same kind with better than well. JOHNSON.

454. Were busied—] The quarto 1608 reads,—were troubled—— STEEVENS.

455. ——so idly king'd,] Shakspeare is not singular in his use of this verb to king. I find it in Warner's Albion's England, B. VIII. c. xlii.

“ ——and king'd his sister's son.” STEEVENS.

460. You are too much mistaken in this king:] This part is much enlarged since the first writing. POPE.

464. How modest in exception,—] How diffident and decent in making objections. JOHNSON.

467. Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus.]

Our

Our author's meaning is sufficiently explained by the following lines in The Rape of Lucrece, 1594:

“ Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece's side,
 “ Seeing such emulation in their woe,
 “ Began to cloath his wit in state and pride,
 “ Burying in Lucrece's wound his folly's show.
 “ He with the Romans was esteemed so,
 “ As silly jeering ideots are with kings,
 “ For sportive words and uttering foolish things.
 “ But now he throws that shallow habit by “ Wherein deep policy did him disguise,
 “ And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly
 “ To check the tears in Colatinus' eyes.”

MALONE.

476. Which of a weak and niggardly projection,] This passage, as it stands, is so perplexed, that I cannot help thinking it corrupt, if which be referred to proportions of defence (and I do not see to what else it can be referred), the construction will be—“ which proportions of defence, of a weak and niggardly projection, &c. doth, like a miser,” &c. I suspect the author wrote:

“ While oft, a weak and niggardly projection “ Doth,” &c.

The reason then is clear.—In cases of defence, it is best to imagine the enemy more powerful than he seems to be; by this means, we make more full and ample preparations to defend ourselves: whereas, on the contrary, a poor and mean idea of the enemy's strength induces us to make but a scanty provision of forces against against him; wherein we act as a miser does, who spoils his coat by scanting a little cloth.

Projection, I believe, is here used for fore-cast or preconception. It may, however, mean preparation.

MALONE.

We might with less violence read:

“So the proportion of defence is fill’d.”

Which, however, according to Shakspeare’s licentious grammar, may refer only to the word defence, and not to proportions of defence.

STEEVENS.

482. ———strain] lineage.

REED.

483. ———That haunted us——] To haunt is a word of the utmost horror, which shews that they dreaded the English as goblins or spirits.

JOHNSON.

485. ———Cressy battle fatally was struck,] So, in Robert of Gloucester:

“———and that fole of Somersete,———

“His come and smyte a battell.”

Again, in the title to one of Sir David Lyndsay’s poems, “How king Ninus began the first warres and strake the first batayle.”

STEEVENS.

488. While that his mountain sire, on mountain standing,] We should read, mounting, ambitious, aspiring.

WARBURTON.

Thus, in Love’s Labour Lost, act iv.

“Whoe’er he was, he shew’d a mounting mind.”

Dr. Warburton’s emendation may be right, and yet I believe the poet meant to give an idea of more than human proportion in the figure of the king:

“Quantus

“Quantus Athos, aut quantus Eryx,” &c. Virg.

“Like Teneriffe or Atlas unremov’d.” Milton.

Drayton, in the 18th song of his Polyolbion, has a similar thought:

“Then he, above them all, himself that sought to raise,

“Upon some mountain top, like a pyramides.”

Again, in Spenser’s Faerie Queene, B. I. c. xi.

“Where stretch’d he lay upon the sunny side

“Of a great hill, himself like a great hill.”

——agmen agens, magnique ipse agminis instar.

Mr. Tollet thinks this passage may be explained by another, in act i. sc. i.

“——his most mighty father on a hill.”

STEEVENS.

489. Up in the air, crown’d with the golden sun,——]

This idea might have been taken from Chaucer’s Legende of good Women:

“Her gilt here was ycrowned with a son.”

STEEVENS.

495. ——fate of him,] His fate is what is allotted him by destiny, or what he is said to perform.

JOHNSON.

So Virgil, speaking of the future deeds of the descendants of Æneas:

“Attolens humeris famamque et fata nepotum.”

STEEVENS.

501. ——spend their mouths,——] i. e. bark, the sportsman’s term.

JOHNSON.

520. ———memorable line,] This genealogy; this deduction of his lineage. JOHNSON.

539. The dead man's blood,——] The disposition of the images were more regular if we were to read thus:

———upon your head

Turning the dead man's blood, the widows' tears,

The orphans' cries, the pining maidens' groans.

JOHNSON.

The quarto 1600 and 1608 exhibit the passage thus:

“And on your heads turns he the widows' tears,

“The orphans' cries, the dead men's bones,

“The pining maidens' groans,

“For husbands, fathers, and distressed lovers,

“Which,” &c.

These quartos of 1600 and 1608 agree in all but the merest trifles; and therefore, for the future, I shall content myself in general to quote the former of them, which is the more correct of the two. STEEVENS.

558. Shall chide your trespass,——] To chide is to resound, to echo. So, in The Midsummer Night's Dream:

“———never did I hear

“Such gallant chiding.”

So, in Henry VIII.

“As doth a rock against the chiding flood.”

STEEVENS.

570. ———he masters now;——] Thus the folio. The quartos 1600 and 1608, read musters. STEEVENS.

571. ———which you shall read] The folio has]

———that you shall read.

E

The

The quarto:

——— which you shall find.

MALONE.

ACT III.

Line 14. —— RIVAGE ——] The bank or shore.

JOHNSON.

Rivage, French. So, in Spenser's Faery Queene, B. IV. c. i.

“ Paëtolus with his waters shere “ Throws forth upon the rivage round about him nere.”

Again, in Gower, De Confessione Amantis, lib. viii. fol.
186.

“ Upon the stronde at rivage.” STEEVENS.

18. —— to sternage of this navy ;] The stern being the hinder part of the ship, the meaning is, let your minds follow close after the navy. STEEVENS.

33. —— linstock ——] The staff to which the match is fixed when ordnance is fired. JOHNSON.

So, in Middleton's comedy of Blurt Master Constable, 1602: —— “ O Cupid, grant that my blushing prove not a linstocke, and give fire too suddenly,” &c.

Again, in the Jew of Malta, by Marlow, 1633:

“ Till you shall hear a culverin discharg'd

“ By him that bears the linstock kindled thus.”

STEEVENS.

35. And eke out our performance with your mind.] The first and second folio both read —— eech out ; and so,
it

it appears, the word was anciently pronounced.

Thus, in Pericles Prince of Tyre, 1609 :

“ And time that is so briefly spent

“ With your fine fancies quaintly each ;

“ What's dumb in shew I'll plain with speech.”

MALONE.

37. Or close the wall——] Here is apparently a chasin. One line at least is lost, which contained the other part of a disjunctive proposition. The king's speech is, dear friends, either win the town, or close up the wall with dead. The old quatto gives no help. JOHNSON.

This speech was added after the quartos 1600 and 1608. STEEVENS.

40. ——when the blast of war blows in our ears,

Then imitate the action of the tyger ;] Sir Tho. Hanmer has observed on the following passage in Troilus and Cressida, that in storms and high winds the tyger roars and rages most furiously.

“ ————even so

“ Doth valour's shew and valour's worth divide

“ In storms of fortune : for, in her ray and brightness,

“ The herd hath more annoyance by the brize

“ Than by the tyger : but when splitting winds

“ Make flexible the knees of knotted oaks,

“ And flies flee under shade ; why then the thing of courage,

“ As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,” &c. STEEVENS.

45. ———portage of the head,——] Portage, open space, from port, a gate. Let the eye appear in the head as cannon through the battlements, or embrasures, of a fortification. JOHNSON.

48. ———his confounded base——] His worn or wasted base. JOHNSON.

51. ———bend up every spirit] A metaphor from the bow. JOHNSON.

53. Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof!] Thus the folio 1623, and rightly. So, Spenser's Faery Queene, B. III.

“Whom strange adventure did from Britain fet.” Again, in the Prologue to Ben Jonson's Silent Woman:

“Though there be none far-fet, there will dear bought.”

Again, in Lord Surrey's Translation of the second book of Virgil's Æneid:

“And with the winde had fet the land of Greece.”

The sacred writings afford many instances to the same purpose. STEEVENS.

56. ———argument.] Is matter, or subject. JOHNSON.

72. ———corporal,——] We should read lieutenant. It is Bardolph to whom he speaks. STEEVENS.

73. ———a case of lives:——] A set of lives, of which, when one is worn out, another may serve.

JOHNSON.

Perhaps only two; as a case of pistols; and, in Ben Jonson, a case of masques. WHALLEY.

84. If wishes, &c.] This passage I have replaced from the first folio, which is the only authentic copy of this play. These lines, which perhaps are part of a song, Mr. Pope did not like, and therefore changed them in conformity to the imperfect play in the quarto, and was followed by the succeeding editors. For prevail, I should read avail. JOHNSON.

87. As duty, &c.] This speech I have restored from the folio. STEEVENS.

89. Enter Fluellen.] The direction in the quarto is—“Enter Fluellen, and beats them in.” MALONE.

———up t the preaches, &c.] Thus the quarto, with only the difference of breaches instead of preaches. Modern editors have been very liberal of their Welch dialect. The folio reads, Up to the breach you dogges, avaunt you cullions. STEEVENS.

91. Be merciful, great Duke, &c.] Duke, means no more here than commander. So, in the language of our author and his contemporaries, Duke Theseus, Duke Hannibal, &c. MALONE.

91. ——to men of mould!] To men of earth, to poor mortal men. JOHNSON.

So in the Countess of Pembroke's Yvychurch, “at length man was made of mold, by crafty Prometheus.”

STEEVENS.

105. ——best men;—] i. e. bravest; so in the next lines, good deeds are brave actions. JOHNSON.

115. ——the men would carry coals.—] It appears that in Shakspeare's age, to carry coals was, I know not why, to endure affronts. So, in Romeo and Juliet, one servingman asks another whether he will carry coals. STEEVENS.

Cant phrases are the ephemerons of literature. In the quartos 1600 and 1608, the passage stands thus:

“I knew by that they meant to carry coales.”

STEEVENS.

131. ——— is digt himself four yards under the countermines :——] Fluellen means, that the enemy had digged himself countermines four yards under the mines.

JOHNSON.

132. ——— will plow up all,——] i. e. he will blow up all. JOHNSON.

171. ——— I sall quit you,——] i. e. I shall, with your permission, requite you, i. e. answer you, or interpose with my arguments, as I shall find opportunity.

JOHNSON.

209. there's an end.] It were to be wished that the poor merriment of this dialogue had not been purchased with so much profaneness. JOHNSON.

219. The gates of mercy shall be all shut up;] Mr. Gray has borrowed this thought in his Elegy:

“And shut the gates of mercy on mankind.”

STEEVENS.

We again meet this significant expression in The Third Part of K. Henry VI.

“Open thy gate of mercy, gracious Lord.”

MALONE.

226. ——— fell feats,
Enlink'd to waste and desolation?] All the savage vage vage practices naturally concomitant to the sack of cities. JOHNSON.

238. Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace O'er-blows the filthy and contagious clouds] To over-blow is to drive away, or to keep off. JOHNSON.

244. Defile the locks, &c.] The folio reads,

Desire the locks, &c. STEEVENS.

267. —we are addrest.] i. e. prepared.

STEEVENS.

267. Scene IV.] I have left this ridiculous scene as I found it: and am sorry to have no colour left, from any of the editions, to imagine it interpolated.

WARBURTON.

Sir Thomas Hanmer has rejected it. The scene is indeed mean enough, when it is read; but the grimaces of two French women, and the odd accent with which they uttered the English, made it divert upon the stage. It may be observed, that there is in it not only the French language, but the French spirit. Alice compliments the princess upon her knowledge of four words, and tells her that she pronounces like the English themselves. The princess suspects no deficiency in her instructress, nor the instructress in herself. Throughout the whole scene there may be found French servility, and French vanity.

I cannot forbear to transcribe the first sentence of this dialogue from the edition of 1608, that the reader, who has not looked into the old copies, may judge of the the strange negligence with which they are printed.

“Kate.

“Kate. Alice venecia, vous aves cates on, vou perte fort bon Angloys Englatara, coman sae palla vou la main en Francoys.”

JOHNSON.

We may observe in general, that the early editions have not half the quantity; and every sentence, or rather every word, most ridiculously blundered. These, for several reasons, could not possibly be published by the author; and it is extremely probable, that the French ribaldry was at first inserted by a different hand, as the many additions most certainly were after he had left the stage.—Indeed, every friend to his memory will not easily believe, that he was acquainted with the scene between Katherine and the old Gentlewoman: or surely he would not have admitted such obscenity and nonsense.

FARMER.

It is very certain, that authors in the time of Shakspeare did not correct the press for themselves. I hardly ever saw in one of the old plays a sentence of either Latin, Italian, or French, without the most ridiculous blunders. In the Hist. of Clyomon, Knight of the Golden Shield, 1599, a tragedy which I have often quoted, a warrior asks a lady, disguised like a page, what her name is? She answers, “Cur Dacere,” i. e. Cœur d’Acier, Heart of Steel.

STEEVENS.

268. Kat. Alice, tu as esté——] I have regulated several speeches in this French scene; some whereof were given to Alice, and yet evidently belonged to Katharine: and so, vice versa. It is not material to distinguish the particular transpositions I have made.

Mr.

Mr. Gildon has left no bad remark, I think, with regard to our poet's conduct in the character of this princess: "For why he should not allow her," says he, "to speak in English as well as all the other French, I can't imagine; since it adds no beauty, but gives a patch'd and pye-bald dialogue of no beauty or force."

THEOBALD.

In the collection of Chester Whitsun Mysteries, among the Harleian MSS. No. 1013, I find French speeches introduced. In the Vintner's Play, p. 65, the three kings, who come to worship our infant Saviour, address themselves to Herod in that language, and Herod very politely answers them in the same. At first, I supposed the author to have appropriated a foreign tongue to them, because they were strangers; but in the Skynner's Play, p. 144, I found Pilate talking French, when no such reason could be offered to justify a change of language. These mysteries are said to have been written in 1328. It is hardly necessary to mention that in this MS. the French is as much corrupted as in the passage quoted by Dr. Johnson from the quarto edition of K. Henry V.

STEEVENS.

321. ———de fingre———] It is apparent by the correction of Alice, that the princess forgot the nails, and therefore it should be left out in her part.

JOHNSON.

330. ———our father's luxury,] In this place, as in others, luxury means lust.

JOHNSON.

331. ———savage———] Is here used in the French original original sense, for silvan uncultivated, the same with wild. JOHNSON.

333. And over-grow their grafters?] For this reading there is no authority. The folio has—over-look. The quarto—out-grow. MALONE.

338. In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.] Shotten, signifies any thing projected: so nook-shotten isle, is an isle that shoots out into caps, promontories, and necks of land, the very figure of Great Britain,

WARBURTON.

342. —Can sodden water,

A drench for sur-reyn'd jades,—] The exact meaning of sur-reyn'd I do not know. It is common to give horses, over-ridden or feverish, ground malt and hot water mixed, which is called a mash. To this he alludes. JOHNSON.

The word sur-reyn'd occurs more than once in the old plays. So, in Jack Drum's Entertainment, 1601:

“Writes he not a good cordial sappy stile?—

“A sur-rein'd jaded wit, but he rubs on.”

It should be observ'd that the quartos 1600 and 1608 read,

“——A drench for swolen jades. STEEVENS.

349. Sweat drops of gallant youth——] The quarto read, “Sweat drops of youthful blood—— MALONE.

350. Poor—we may call them——] May was added in the second folio. MALONE.

357. —lavoltas high,——] Hanmer observes, that that in this dance there was much turning and much capering. Shakspeare mentions it more than once, but never so particularly as the author of Muleasses the Turk, a tragedy 1610:

“ Be pleas’d, ye powers of night, and ’bout me skip
 “ Your antick measures; like to coal-black moors “ Dancing their high lavoltoes to the sun,
 “ Circle me round: and in the midst I’ll stand,
 “ And crack my sides with laughter at your sports.”

Again, in Chapman’s May-day, 1606:

“ ———let the Bourdeaux grape
 “ Skip like la volta’s in their swelling veins.”

Again:

“ Where love doth dance la volta’s——”

STEEVENS.

Lavoltas are thus described by Sir John Davies, in his poem called Orchestra, as cited by Mr. Reed:

“ Yet is there one the most delightful kind,
 “ A lofty jumping, or a leaping round,
 “ Where arm in arm, two dancers are entwin’d
 “ And whirl themselves with strict embrace-ments bound,
 “ And still their feet an anapest do sound,
 “ An anapest is all their music’s song, “ Whose first two feet is short, and third is long.
 “ As the victorious twins of Leda and Jove “ That taught the Spartans dancing on the sands.

“ Of

“ Of swift Eurotas, dance in heav’n above,
 “ Knit and united with eternal hands,
 “ Among the stars their double image stands,
 “ Where both are carried with an equal pace,
 “ Together jumping in their turning race.”

364. Charles De-la-bret,——] Milton somewhere bids the English take notice how their names are misspelt by foreigners, and seems to think that we may lawfully treat foreign names in return with the same neglect. This privilege seems to be exercised in this catalogue of French names, which, since the sense of the author is not affected, I have left as I found it.

JOHNSON.

I have changed the spelling; for I know not why we should leave blunders or antiquated orthography in the proper names, when we have been so careful to remove them both from all other parts of the text. Instead of Charles De-la-bret, we should read Charles D’Albrat; but the metre will not allow it. STEEVENS.

373. With pennons——] Pennons armorial were small flags, on which the arms, device and motto of a knight, were painted.

Pennon is the same as pendant. So, in The Stately Moral of the Three Lords of London, 1590:

“ In glitt’ring gold and particolour’d plumes,
 “ With curious pendants on their launces fix’d,”
 &c.

Again, in Chaucer’s Knyghtes Tale, v. 290, late edit.

“ And by his banner borne is his penon
 “ Of gold ful riche, in which there was ybete

“ The

“The Minotaure which that he slew in Crete.”

In MS. Harl. No. 2413, is the following note:

Penon.

“A penon must bee two yardes and a half longe made round att the end, and conteyneth the armes of the owner, and serveth for the conduct of fiftie men.”

“Everye knight may have his pennon if hee bee cheefe captaine, and in it sett his armes: and if he bee made bannerett, the king or the lieftenant shall make a slit in the end of the pennon, and the heralds shall rase it out.”

Pencelles.

Pencells or flagges for horsemen must bee a yarde and a halfe longe, with crosses of St George,” &c.

STEEVENS.

374. ———melted snow] The poet has here defeated himself by passing too soon from one image to another. To bid the French rush upon the English as the torrents formed from melted snow stream from the Alps, was at once vehement and proper, but its force is destroyed by the grossness of the thought in the next line.

JOHNSON.

376. The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon:]

“Jupiter hybernas canâ nive conspuit Alpes.”

Fur. Bibac. ap. Hor. STEEVENS.

418. Of buxom valour,——] i. e. valour under good command, obedient to its superiors. So, in Spenser's Faery Queene:

“Love tyrannizeth in the bitter smarts

“Of them that to him are buxom and prone.”

STEEVENS.

“ Of swift Eurotas, dance in heav’n above,
 “ Knit and united with eternal hands,
 “ Among the stars their double image stands,
 “ Where both are carried with an equal pace,
 “ Together jumping in their turning race.”

364. Charles De-la-bret,——] Milton somewhere bids the English take notice how their names are misspelt by foreigners, and seems to think that we may lawfully treat foreign names in return with the same neglect. This privilege seems to be exercised in this catalogue of French names, which, since the sense of the author is not affected, I have left as I found it.

JOHNSON.

I have changed the spelling; for I know not why we should leave blunders or antiquated orthography in the proper names, when we have been so careful to remove them both from all other parts of the text. Instead of Charles De-la-bret, we should read Charles D’Albrat; but the metre will not allow it. STEEVENS.

373. With pennons——] Pennons armorial were small flags, on which the arms, device and motto of a knight, were painted.

Pennon is the same as pendant. So, in The Stately Moral of the Three Lords of London, 1590:

“ In glitt’ring gold and particolour’d plumes,
 “ With curious pendants on their launces fix’d,”
 &c.

Again, in Chaucer’s Knyghtes Tale, v. 290, late edit.

“ And by his banner borne is his penon .
 “ Of gold ful riche, in which there was ybete

“ The

“The Minotaure which that he slew in Crete.”

In MS. Harl. No. 2413, is the following note:

Penon.

“A penon must bee two yardes and a half longe made round att the end, and conteyneth the armes of the owner, and serveth for the conduct of fiftie men.”

“Everye knight may have his pennon if hee bee cheefe captaine, and in it sett his armes: and if he bee made bannerett, the king or the lieftenant shall make a slit in the end of the pennon, and the heralds shall rase it out.”

Pencelles.

Pencells or flagges for horsemen must bee a yarde and a halfe longe, with crosses of St George,” &c.

STEEVENS.

374. ———melted snow] The poet has here defeated himself by passing too soon from one image to another. To bid the French rush upon the English as the torrents formed from melted snow stream from the Alps, was at once vehement and proper, but its force is destroyed by the grossness of the thought in the next line.

JOHNSON.

376. The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon:]

“Jupiter hybernas canâ nive conspuit Alpes.”

Fur. Bibac. ap. Hor. STEEVENS.

418. Of buxom valour,——] i. e. valour under good command, obedient to its superiors. So, in Spenser's Faery Queene:

“Love tyrannizeth in the bitter smarts

“Of them that to him are buxom and prone.”

STEEVENS.

420. That goddess blind,

That stands upon the rolling restless stone——]

Fortune is described by Cebes, and by Pacuvius, in the fragments of Latin authors, p. 60. and in the 1st book of the pieces to Herennius, precisely in these words of our poet. It is unnecessary to quote them. S. W.

422. Fortune is painted plind, with a muffler before her eyes, to signify to you that fortune is plind:——] Fortune the Goddess is represented blind, to shew that fortune or the chance of life, is without discernment.

STEEVENS.

This picture of Fortune is taken from the old history of Fortunatus; where she is described to be a fair woman, muffled over the eyes

FARMER.

A muffler appears to have been part of a lady's dress. So, in Mons. Thomas, 1639:

“On with my muffler.”

STEEVENS.

433. The old editions,

For he hath stol'n a pax,——] “And this is conformable to history,” says Mr. Pope, “a soldier (as Hall tells us) being hang'd at this time for such a fact.”——Both Hall and Holinshed agree as to the point of theft; but as to the thing stolen, there is not that conformity betwixt them and Mr. Pope. It was an ancient custom, at the celebration of mass, that when the priest pronounced these words, Pax Domini sit semper nobiscum! both clergy and people kissed one another. But that custom being abrogated, a certain image is now presented to be kissed, which is called a Pix. But it was not this image which Bardolph stole;
it it was a pix, or little chest (from the Latin word, pixis, a box); in which the consecrated host was used to be kept. “A foolish soldier,” says Hall expressly, and Holinshed after him, “stole a pix out of a church.”

THEOBALD.

What Theobald says is true, but might have been told in fewer words: I have examined the passage in Hall. Yet Dr. Warburton rejected that emendation, and continued Pope's note without animadversion.

It is pax in the folio 1623; but altered to pix by Theobald and Sir Thomas Hanmer. They signified the same thing. See Pax at Mass, Minshew's Guide into the Tongues. Pix or pax was a little box in which were kept the consecrated wafers.

JOHNSON.

So, in May Day, a comedy, by Chapman, 1611; “—Kiss the pax, and be quiet like your neighbours.”

So, in The Downfall of Robert Earl of Huntingdon, 1601:

“Then with this hallow'd crucifix,

“This holy wafer, and this pix.”

That a pix and a pax were different things, may be seen from the following passage in the History of our Blessed Lady of Loretto, 12mo. 1608, p. 595.

“—a cup, and a sprinkle for holy water, a pix and a pax, all of excellent chrystal, gold and amber.”

Again, in Stowe's Chronicle, p. 677: “—palmes, chalices, crosses, vestments, pixes, paxes, and such like.”

STEEVENS.

Pix, is apparently right. In Henry the VII's will, it is said, “forasmoch as we have often and many “tymes to our inwarde regrete and displeasure seen at

“ our Jen, in diverse many churches of oure realme,
 “ the holie sacrament of the aulter, kept in ful, simple,
 “ and inhonest pixes, spicially pixes of copre and tym“ bre; we have appointed and commaunded the trea“ surer of our chambre, and maistre of our juell“ houss, to cause to be made furthwith, pixes of silver “ and gilt, in a great nombre, for the keping of the “ holie sacrament of the aulter, after the faction of a “ pixe, that we have caused to be delivered to theim, “ every of the said pixes, to be of the value of 1111*l*.
 “ garnished with our armes, and rede roses and part“ colis crowned.” P. 33. REED:

445. Why then rejoyce therefore.] This passage, with several others in the character of Pistol, is ridiculed by Ben Jonson, in The Poetaster, as follows,

“ Why then lament therefore; damn’d be thy guts

“ Unto king Pluto’s hell, and princely Erebus;

“ For sparrows must have food.” STEEVENS.

451. —Figo for thy friendship!] This expression occurs likewise in Ram-Alley, or Merry Tricks, 1610:

“ ———water at the dock,

“ A fico for her dock.”

Again:

“ A fico for the sun and moon.” STEEVENS.

453. The fig of Spain!] This is no allusion to the fico already explained in The Merry Wives of Windsor; but to the custom of giving poison’d figs to those who were the objects either of Spanish or Italian revenge.
 The quartos 1600 and 1608 read,

“ The

“ The fig of Spain within thy jaw :”

And afterwards :

“ The fig within thy bowels and thy dirty maw.”

So, in The Fleire, 1610, a comedy,

“ Fel. Give them a fig.

“ Flo. Make them drink their last.

“ Fel. Poison them.”

Again, in The Brothers, by Shirley, 1652 :

“ I must poison him; one fig sends him to Erebus.”

Again, in Ben Jonson's Every Man in his Humour :

“ The lye to a man of my coat, is as ominous a fruit as the fico.”

Again, in one of Gascoign's Poems :

“ It may fall out thou shalt be entic'd

“ To sup sometimes with a magnifico,

“ And have a fico foisted in thy dish,” &c.

Again, in Decker's Match me in London, 1631 :

“ Cor. Now do I look for a fig.

“ Gaz. Chew none, fear nothing :”

and the scene of this play lies at Seville.

Again, in The Noble Soldier, 1634 :

“ ——Is it (poison) speeding?——

“ As all our Spanish figs are.”

Again, in Vittoria Corombona, 1612 :

“ I look now for a Spanish fig, or an Italian sallad daily.”

STEEVENS.

I believe the Fig of Spain is here used only as a term of contempt. In the old translation of Galateo of Manners and behaviour, p. 81, we have,

“ She gave the Spanish figge,

“ With both her thumbes at once.”

REED.

And in Fulwel's Art of Flattery,

“ And thus farewell I will returne

“ To lady hope agayne,

“ And for a token I thee sende,

“ A doting Fig of Spayne.”

HENLEY.

454. —Flu: Very good.] Instead of these two words, the quartos read:—

“ Captāin Gower, cannot you hear it lighten and thunder?”

STEEVENS.

466. —a sconce,—] Appears to have been some hasty, rude, inconsiderable kind of fortification. Sir Thomas Smythe, in one of his Discourses on the Art Military, 1589, mentions them in the following manner: “—and that certain sconces by them devised, without anie bulwarks, flanckers, travasses, mounts, platformes, wet or drie ditches, in forme, with counter-scarps, or any other good forme of fortification, but only raised and formed with earth, turfe, trench, and certen poynts, angles, and indents, should be able to hold out the enemye,” &c.

STEEVENS.

So, Falstaff in The Merry Wives of Windsor; “ I will ensconce (i. e. entrench) myself behind the arras.”

BLACKSTONE.

471. —a horrid suit of the camp,] Thus the folio. The 4tos 1600, &c. read—a horrid shout of the camp.

STEEVENS.

Suit, I have no doubt, is the true reading. Suit, in our author's time, appears to have been pronounced shoot.

shoot. [See a note on Love's Labour Lost.] Hence the quarto, which was, I believe, copied by the ear, has —shout. MALONE.

474. —such slanders of the age,—] This was a character very troublesome to wise men in our author's time. "It is the practice with him," says Ascham, "to be warlike, though he never looked enemy in the face, yet some warlike sign must be used, as a slovenly buskin, or an over-staring frowned head, as though out of every hair's top should suddenly start a good big oath." JOHNSON.

480. —I must speak with him from the pridge.] Fluellen, who comes from the bridge, wants to acquaint the king with the transactions that had happened there. This he calls speaking to the king from the pridge.

THEOBALD.

481. —Drums and colours. Enter the King, Gloucester, and Soldiers.] The direction in the folio is—"Drums and colours. Enter the king and his poor soldiers."

This was, I suppose, by way of introduction to the subsequent description in the chorus of Act IV. "The poor condemned English," &c. MALONE.

494. —one that is like to be executed—] The quarto has not these words; and I think they might well be omitted. For, from the latter part of Fluellen's speech, it should seem, that Bardolph was already executed: "His nose is executed, and his fire's out."

MALONE.

497. —and wheelks, and knobs,—] So, in Chaucer's character

character of a Sompnour, from which, perhaps, Shakspeare took some hints for his description of Bardolph's face :

“ A Sompnour was ther with us in that place

“ That hadde a fire-red cherubinnes face, &c.

“ —————

“ Ther n'as quicksilver, litarge, ne brimston,

“ Boras, ceruse, ne oile of tartre non,

“ Ne oinement that wolde clense or bite,

“ That might him helpen of his whelkes white,

“ Ne of the knobbes sitting on his chekes.”

See the prologue to the Canterbury Tales, late edit. v. 628, &c.

STEEVENS.

500. ————his fire's out.] This is the last time that any sport can be made with the red face of Bardolph, which, to confess the truth, seems to have taken more hold on Shakspeare's imagination than any other. The conception is very cold to the solitary reader, though it may be somewhat invigorated by the exhibition on the stage. This poet is always more careful about the present than the future, about his audience than his readers.

JOHNSON.

508. ————Enter Montjoy.] Mont-joie is the title of the first king at arms in France, as Garter is in our own country.

STEEVENS.

—————by my habit.] That is, by his herald's coat. The person of a herald being inviolable, was distinguished in those times of formality by a peculiar dress, which is likewise yet worn on particular occasions.

JOHNSON.

518. ———upon our cue,—] In our turn. This phrase the author learned among players, and has imparted it to kings. JOHNSON.

531. ———so much my office.] This speech, as well as another preceding it, was first compress'd into verse by Mr. Pope. Where he wanted a syllable, he supplied it, and where there were too many for his purpose, he made suitable omissions. Shakspeare (if we may believe some of the old copies) meant both speeches for prose, and as such I have printed them. STEEVENS.

538. ———Without impeachment.] i. e. hindrance. Empechemens, French. STEEVENS.

552. ———God before,——] This was an expression in that age for God being my guide; or, when used to another, God by thy guide. So, in an old dialogue between a herdsman and a maiden going on pilgrimage to Walsingham, the herdsman takes his leave in these words:

“Now, go thy ways, and God before.”

To prevent was used in the same sense. JOHNSON.

554. ———There's for thy labour, Montjoy.] It appears from many ancient books that it was always customary to reward a herald, whether he brought defiance or congratulation. So, in the ancient metrical history of the Battle of Floddon:

“Then gave he to the herald's hand,

“Besides, with it, a rich reward;

“Who hasten'd to his native land

“To see how with his king it far'd.”

STEEVENS.

569. —Scene VII.] This scene is shorter, and I think better, in the first editions of 1600 and 1608; but as the enlargements appear to be author's own, I would not omit them. POPE.

581. ———He bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs ;——] Alluding to the bounding of tennis-balls, which were stuffed with hair, as appears from Much Ado about Nothing, “And the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuff'd tennis-balls.”

WARBURTON.

589. ———he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him,] Thus Cleopatra, speaking of herself,

“I am air and fire; my other elements

“I give to baser life.”

STEEVENS.

592. ———and all other jades you may call—beasts.] It is plain that jades and beasts should change places, it being the first word and not the last, which is the term of reproach; as afterwards it is said,

I had as live have my mistress a jade.

WARBURTON.

There is no occasion for this change. In the Second Part of King Henry IV. scene i.

“—— he gave his able horse the head,

“And, bending forward, struck his armed heels

“Against the panting sides of the poor jade.”

Jade is sometimes used for a post horse. Beast is always employed as a contemptuous distinction. So, in Macbeth:

“—— what

“—— what beast was't then

“ That made you break this enterprize to me : ”

Again, in Timon : “—what a wicked beast was I to disfurnish myself against so good a time.”

STEEVENS.

609. ——Wonder of nature——] In the first part of K. Henry VI. act. V. sc. iv. Shakspeare himself uses the phrase which he here seems to ridicule :

“ Be not offended, nature's miracle ! ”

MALONE.

The phrase is only reprehensible through its misapplication. It is surely proper when applied to a woman, but ridiculous indeed when addressed to a horse.

STEEVENS.

622. ——like a kerne of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait trossers.] This word very frequently occurs in the old dramattick writers. A man in The Coxcomb of Beaumont and Fletcher, speaking to an Irish servant, says, “ I'll have thee flead, and trossers made of thy skin, to tumble in.” Trossers appear to have been tight breeches.—The kerns of Ireland anciently rode without breeches, and therefore strait trossers, I believe, means only in their naked skins, which sits close to them. The word is still preserved, but now written trowsers.

STEEVENS.

“ Trowses,” says the explanatory Index to Cox's History of Ireland, “ are breeches and stockings made to fit as close to the body as can be.” Several of the morris-dancers, represented upon the print of my window, have such hose or strait trousers ; but the poet seems seems by the waggish context to have a further meaning. TOLLET.

In Sir John Oldcastle, the word is spelt strouces.

COLLINS.

The following stage direction in Ford's Perkin Warbeck, 1634, shews that the lower Irish were, in the time of our author, described and represented as wearing trowsers.—“Enter at one door four Scotch Anticks accordingly habited. Enter at another door, four wild Irish in trowses, long-haired, and accordingly habited.” Yet our author may have intended an equivoque. MALONE.

654. ——— Who will go to hazard with me for twenty English prisoners?] So, in the old anonymous Henry V.

“Come and you see what me tro at the king's drummer and fife.”

“Faith me will tro at the earl of Northumberland; and, now I will tro at the king himsslf, &c.”

This incident, however, might have been furnished by the chronicle. STEEVENS.

680. ——— his lacquey:] He has beaten nobody yet but his footboy. JOHNSON.

——— 'tis a hooded valour; and, when it appears, it will bate.] This is said with allusion to falcons which are kept hooded when they are not to fly at game, and, as soon as the hood is off, bait or flap the wing. The meaning is, the Dauphin's valour has never been let loose upon an enemy, yet, when he makes his first essay, we shall see how he will flutter. JOHNSON.

682.

683. ——— I will cap that proverb—] Alluding to the practice of capping verses. JOHNSON.

688. ——— with, — A pox of the devil!] The quartos 1600 and 1608 read—with, a jogge of the devil.

STEEVENS.

699. ' Would it were day!—] Instead of this and the succeeding speeches, the quartos 1600 and 1608 conclude this scene with a couplet:

———— *Come, come away,
The sun is high, and we wear out the day.*

STEEVENS.

717. ——— give them great meals of beef,—] So in K. Edw. III. 1599 :

“ ——— but scant them of their chines of beef,
“ And take away their downy featherbeds,” &c.

STEEVENS.

ACT IV.

Line 3. FILLS the wide vessel of the universe.] Universe for horizon: for we are not to think Shakspeare so ignorant as to imagine it was night over the whole globe at once. He intimates he knew otherwise, by that fine line in the Midsummer Night's Dream :

———— following darkness like a dream.

Besides, the image he employs shews he meant but half the globe; the horizon round, which has the shape of a vessel or goblet. WARBURTON.

There is a better proof, that Shakspeare knew the order of night and day, in Macbeth:

“ Now o’er one half the world

“ Nature seems dead.”

But there was no great need of any justification. The universe, in its original sense, no more means this globe singly than the circuit of the horizon; but, however large in its philosophical sense, it may be poetically used for as much of the world as falls under observation. Let me remark further, that ignorance cannot be certainly inferred from inaccuracy. Knowledge is not always present. JOHNSON.

The wide vessel of the universe is derived, I apprehend, from a different source than that which Dr. Warburton supposes. Shakspeare in another play stiles night the blanket of the dark: it is probable, that the affinity between blanket and sheet suggested to him the further relation between sheet and vessel, which occurs in the Acts, c. x. v. 11.—“ And saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as if it had been a graet SHEET, knit at the four corners, and let down unto the earth.” HENLEY.

9. —[the other’s umber’d face.] Of this epithet used by Shakspeare in his description of fires reflected by night, Mr. Pope knew the value, and has transplanted it into the Iliad on a like occasion:

“ Whose

“Whose umber'd arms by turns thick flashes send.”

Umbre is a brown colour. So, in As You like It:

“And with a kind of umbre smirch my face.”

The distant visages of the soldiers would certainly appear of this hue when beheld through the light of midnight fires. STEEVENS.

Another interpretation occurs, expressive of the preparation of both armies for an engagement. In Hamlet, act III. Mr. Steevens gives the following quotation from Stowe's Chronicle, “He brast up his umber three times.” Where umber means the vizor of the helmet, as umbriere doth in Spenser, from the French ombre, ombriere, or umbraire, a shadow, an umbrella, or any thing that hides or covers the face. Hence umber'd face may denote a face armed with a helmet, as in K. Henry IV:

“I saw young Harry with his beaver on.”

and in the present play:

“Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,

“And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.”

Beaver here means exactly the same with umber in Stowe. TOLLET.

11. —and from the tents,] See the preparation for the battle between Palamon and Arcite in Chaucer:

“And on the morwe, when the day 'gan spring,

“Of horse and harnesses noise and clattering,

“There was in the hosteliries all about:

“The foamy stedes on the golden bridel

seems by the waggish context to have a further meaning. TOLLET.

In Sir John Oldcastle, the word is spelt strouces.

COLLINS.

The following stage direction in Ford's Perkin Warbeck, 1634, shews that the lower Irish were, in the time of our author, described and represented as wearing trowsers.—“Enter at one door four Scotch Anticks accordingly habited. Enter at another door, four wild Irish in trowses, long-haired, and accordingly habited.” Yet our author may have intended an equivoque. MALONE.

654. ———Who will go to hazard with me for twenty English prisoners?] So, in the old anonymous Henry V.

“Come and you see what me tro at the king's drummer and fife.”

“Faith me will tro at the earl of Northumberland; and, now I will tro at the king himsslf, &c.”

This incident, however, might have been furnished by the chronicle. STEEVENS.

680. ———his lacquey:] He has beaten nobody yet but his footboy. JOHNSON.

———'tis a hooded valour; and, when it appears, it will bate.] This is said with allusion to falcons which are kept hooded when they are not to fly at game, and, as soon as the hood is off, bait or flap the wing. The meaning is, the Dauphin's valour has never been let loose upon an enemy, yet, when he makes his first essay, we shall see how he will flutter. JOHNSON.

682.

683. ——— I will cap that proverb—] Alluding to the practice of capping verses. JOHNSON.

688. ——— with,—A pox of the devil!] The quartos 1600 and 1608 read—with, a jogge of the devil.

STEEVENS.

699. ' Would it were day!—] Instead of this and the succeeding speeches, the quartos 1600 and 1608 conclude this scene with a couplet:

———— *Come, come away,
The sun is high, and we wear out the day.*

STEEVENS.

717. ——— give them great meals of beef,—] So in K. Edw. III. 1599 :

“ ——— but scant them of their chines of beef,

“ And take away their downy featherbeds,” &c.

STEEVENS.

ACT IV.

Line 3. FILLS the wide vessel of the universe.] Universe for horizon: for we are not to think Shakspeare so ignorant as to imagine it was night over the whole globe at once. He intimates he knew otherwise, by that fine line in the Midsummer Night's Dream :

———— following darkness like a dream.

Besides, the image he employs shews he meant but

G

half

half the globe; the horizon round, which has the shape of a vessel or goblet. WARBURTON.

There is a better proof, that Shakspeare knew the order of night and day, in Macbeth:

“Now o’er one half the world

“Nature seems dead.”

But there was no great need of any justification. The universe, in its original sense, no more means this globe singly than the circuit of the horizon; but, however large in its philosophical sense, it may be poetically used for as much of the world as falls under observation. Let me remark further, that ignorance cannot be certainly inferred from inaccuracy. Knowledge is not always present. JOHNSON.

The wide vessel of the universe is derived, I apprehend, from a different source than that which Dr. Warburton supposes. Shakspeare in another play stiles night the blanket of the dark: it is probable, that the affinity between blanket and sheet suggested to him the further relation between sheet and vessel, which occurs in the Acts, c. x. v. 11.—“And saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as if it had been a graet SHEET, knit at the four corners, and let down unto the earth.” HENLEY.

9. —[the other’s umber’d face.] Of this epithet used by Shakspeare in his description of fires reflected by night, Mr. Pope knew the value, and has transplanted it into the Iliad on a like occasion:

“Whose

“Whose umber'd arms by turns thick flashes send.”

Umbre is a brown colour. So, in As You like It:

“And with a kind of umbre smirch my face.”

The distant visages of the soldiers would certainly appear of this hue when beheld through the light of midnight fires. STEEVENS.

Another interpretation occurs, expressive of the preparation of both armies for an engagement. In Hamlet, act III. Mr. Steevens gives the following quotation from Stowe's Chronicle, “He brast up his umber three times.” Where umber means the vizor of the helmet, as umbriere doth in Spenser, from the French ombre, ombriere, or umbraire, a shadow, an umbrella, or any thing that hides or covers the face. Hence umber'd face may denote a face armed with a helmet, as in K. Henry IV:

“I saw young Harry with his bever on.”

and in the present play:

“Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,

“And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.”

Beaver here means exactly the same with umber in Stowe. TOLLET.

11. —and from the tents,] See the preparation for the battle between Palamon and Arcite in Chaucer:

“And on the morwe, when the day 'gan spring,

“Of horse and harnesses noise and clattering,

“There was in the hosteliries all about:

“The foamy stedes on the golden bridel

“ Gnawing, and fast the armurers also

“ With file and hammer priking to and fro.”

WARTON.

19. Do the low-rated English play at dice;] i. e. do play them away at dice. WARBURTON.

26. Investing lank-lean cheeks,——] A gesture investing cheeks and coats is nonsense. We should read:

Invest in lank-lean cheeks———

which is sense, i. e. their sad gesture was cloath'd, or set off, in lean cheeks and worn coats. The image is strong and picturesque. WARBURTON.

Yet perhaps even this change is unnecessary. The harshness of the metaphor is what offends, which means only, that their looks are invested in mournful gestures.

Such another harsh metaphor occurs in Much Ado about Nothing:

“ For my part, I am so attir'd in wonder,

“ I know not what to say.” STEEVENS.

Gesture only relates to their cheeks, after which word there should be a comma, as in the first folio. In the second song of Sidney's Astrophel and Stella:

“ Anger invests the face with a lovely grace.”

TOLLET.

The present time runs throughout the whole of the description, except in this instance, where the change seems very improper. I believe we should read with Hammer, presenteth. STEEVENS.

Investing, perhaps we should read, in fasting, &c.

ANON.

I have

I have no doubt that presenteth, which Mr. Steevens proposes, is the true reading.

If in fasting, which is a most probable conjecture, be admitted, the whole is clear.—Each of these mistakes might easily have happened from a hasty pronunciation, or inattention in the transcriber.

MALONE.

53. Minding true things——] To mind is the same as to call to remembrance. JOHNSON.

63. That we should dress us fairly for our end.] So, in K. Henry IV. P. I.

“They come like sacrifices in their trim.”

STEEVENS.

66. ——old Sir Thomas Erpingham:] Sir Thomas Erpingham came over with Bolingbroke from Bretagne, and was one of the commissioners to receive king Richard's abdication. EDWARDS, MS.

Sir Thomas Erpingham was in Henry V's time warden of Dover castle. His arms are still visible on one side of the Roman pharos. STEEVENS.

76. With casted slough——] Slough is the skin which the serpent annually throws off, and by the change of which he is supposed to regain new vigour and fresh youth. Legerity is lightness, nimbleness. JOHNSON.

So, in Stanyhurst's translation of Virgil, B. IV. 1582:

“His slough uncasing himself now youthfully bleacheth.”

Legerity is a word used by Ben Jonson in Every Man out of his Humour. STEEVENS.

569. —Scene VII.] This scene is shorter, and I think better, in the first editions of 1600 and 1608; but as the enlargements appear to be author's own, I would not omit them. POPE.

581. —He bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs;—] Alluding to the bounding of tennis-balls, which were stuffed with hair, as appears from Much Ado about Nothing, “And the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuff'd tennis-balls.”

WARBURTON.

589. —he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him,] Thus Cleopatra, speaking of herself,

“I am air and fire; my other elements

“I give to baser life.”

STEEVENS.

592. —and all other jades you may call—beasts.] It is plain that jades and beasts should change places, it being the first word and not the last, which is the term of reproach; as afterwards it is said,

I had as live have my mistress a jade.

WARBURTON.

There is no occasion for this change. In the Second Part of King Henry IV. scene i.

“—— he gave his able horse the head,

“And, bending forward, struck his armed heels

“Against the panting sides of the poor jade.”

Jade is sometimes used for a post horse. Beast is always employed as a contemptuous distinction. So, in Macbeth:

“—— what

“—— what beast was't then

“ That made you break this enterprize to me ;”

Again, in Timon: “—what a wicked beast was I to disfurnish myself against so good a time.”

STEEVENS.

609. ——Wonder of nature——] In the first part of K. Henry VI. act. V. sc. iv. Shakspeare himself uses the phrase which he here seems to ridicule :

“ Be not offended, nature's miracle !”

MALONE.

The phrase is only reprehensible through its misapplication. It is surely proper when applied to a woman, but ridiculous indeed when addressed to a horse.

STEEVENS.

622. ——like a kerne of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait trossers.] This word very frequently occurs in the old dramattick writers. A man in The Coxcomb of Beaumont and Fletcher, speaking to an Irish servant, says, “ I'll have thee flead, and trossers made of thy skin, to tumble in.” Trossers appear to have been tight breeches.—The kerns of Ireland anciently rode without breeches, and therefore strait trossers, I believe, means only in their naked skins, which sits close to them. The word is still preserved, but now written trowsers.

STEEVENS.

“ Trowses,” says the explanatory Index to Cox's History of Ireland, “ are breeches and stockings made to fit as close to the body as can be.” Several of the morris-dancers, represented upon the print of my window, have such hose or strait trousers; but the poet seems seems by the waggish context to have a further meaning. TOLLET.

In Sir John Oldcastle, the word is spelt strouces.

COLLINS.

The following stage direction in Ford's Perkin Warbeck, 1634, shews that the lower Irish were, in the time of our author, described and represented as wearing trowsers.—“Enter at one door four Scotch Anticks accordingly habited. Enter at another door, four wild Irish in trowes, long-haired, and accordingly habited.” Yet our author may have intended an equivocate. MALONE.

654. —Who will go to hazard with me for twenty English prisoners?] So, in the old anonymous Henry V.

“Come and you see what me tro at the king's drummer and fife.”

“Faith me will tro at the earl of Northumberland; and, now I will tro at the king himself, &c.”

This incident, however, might have been furnished by the chronicle. STEEVENS.

680. —his lacquey:] He has beaten nobody yet but his footboy. JOHNSON.

——'tis a hooded valour; and, when it appears, it will bate.] This is said with allusion to falcons which are kept hooded when they are not to fly at game, and, as soon as the hood is off, bait or flap the wing. The meaning is, the Dauphin's valour has never been let loose upon an enemy, yet, when he makes his first essay, we shall see how he will flutter. JOHNSON.

682.

683. ——— I will cap that proverb—] Alluding to the practice of capping verses. JOHNSON.

688. ——— with,—A pox of the devil!] The quartos 1600 and 1608 read—with, a jogge of the devil.

STEEVENS.

699. ' Would it were day!—] Instead of this and the succeeding speeches, the quartos 1600 and 1608 conclude this scene with a couplet:

———— *Come, come away,
The sun is high, and we wear out the day.*

STEEVENS.

717. ——— give them great meals of beef,—] So in K. Edw. III. 1599:

“ ——— but scant them of their chines of beef,
“ And take away their downy featherbeds,” &c.

STEEVENS.

ACT IV.

Line 3. FILLS the wide vessel of the universe.] Universe for horizon: for we are not to think Shakspeare so ignorant as to imagine it was night over the whole globe at once. He intimates he knew otherwise, by that fine line in the Midsummer Night's Dream:

———— following darkness like a dream.

Besides, the image he employs shews he meant but half the globe; the horizon round, which has the shape of a vessel or goblet. WARBURTON.

There is a better proof, that Shakspeare knew the order of night and day, in Macbeth:

“ Now o’er one half the world

“ Nature seems dead.”

But there was no great need of any justification. The universe, in its original sense, no more means this globe singly than the circuit of the horizon; but, however large in its philosophical sense, it may be poetically used for as much of the world as falls under observation. Let me remark further, that ignorance cannot be certainly inferred from inaccuracy. Knowledge is not always present. JOHNSON.

The wide vessel of the universe is derived, I apprehend, from a different source than that which Dr. Warburton supposes. Shakspeare in another play stiles night the blanket of the dark: it is probable, that the affinity between blanket and sheet suggested to him the further relation between sheet and vessel, which occurs in the Æts, c. x. v. 11.—“ And saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as if it had been a graet SHEET, knit at the four corners, and let down unto the earth.” HENLEY.

9. —[the other’s umber’d face.] Of this epithet used by Shakspeare in his description of fires reflected by night, Mr. Pope knew the value, and has transplanted it into the Iliad on a like occasion:

“ Whose

“Whose umber'd arms by turns thick flashes send.”

Umbre is a brown colour. So, in As You like It:

“And with a kind of umbre smirch my face.”

The distant visages of the soldiers would certainly appear of this hue when beheld through the light of midnight fires. STEEVENS.

Another interpretation occurs, expressive of the preparation of both armies for an engagement. In Hamlet, act III. Mr. Steevens gives the following quotation from Stowe's Chronicle, “He brast up his umber three times.” Where umber means the vizor of the helmet, as umbriere doth in Spenser, from the French ombre, ombriere, or umbraire, a shadow, an umbrella, or any thing that hides or covers the face. Hence umber'd face may denote a face armed with a helmet, as in K. Henry IV:

“I saw young Harry with his beaver on.”

and in the present play:

“Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,

“And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.”

Beaver here means exactly the same with umber in Stowe. TOLLET.

11. —and from the tents,] See the preparation for the battle between Palamon and Arcite in Chaucer:

“And on the morwe, when the day 'gan spring,

“Of horse and harnesses noise and clattering,

“There was in the hosteliries all about:

“The foamy stedes on the golden bridel

“ Gnawing, and fast the armurers also

“With file and hammer priking to and fro.”

WARTON.

19. Do the low-rated English play at dice;] i. e. do play them away at dice. WARBURTON.

26. Investing lank-lean cheeks,—] A gesture investing cheeks and coats is nonsense. We should read :

Invest in lank-lean cheeks———

which is sense, i. e. their sad gesture was cloath'd, or set off, in lean cheeks and worn coats. The image is strong and picturesque. WARBURTON.

Yet perhaps even this change is unnecessary. The harshness of the metaphor is what offends, which means only, that their looks are invested in mournful gestures.

Such another harsh metaphor occurs in Much Ado about Nothing :

“ For my part, I am so attir'd in wonder,

"I know not what to say." STEEVENS.

Gesture only relates to their cheeks, after which word there should be a comma, as in the first folio. In the second song of Sidney's Astrophel and Stella :

“ Anger invests the face with a lovely grace.”

TOLLET.

The present time runs throughout the whole of the description, except in this instance, where the change seems very improper. I believe we should read with Hanmer, presenteth. STEEVENS.

Investing, perhaps we should read, in fasting, &c.

ANON.

I have

I have no doubt that presenteth, which Mr. Steevens proposes, is the true reading.

If in fasting, which is a most probable conjecture, be admitted, the whole is clear.—Each of these mistakes might easily have happened from a hasty pronunciation, or inattention in the transcriber.

MALONE.

53. Minding true things——] To mind is the same as to call to remembrance. JOHNSON.

63. That we should dress us fairly for our end.] So, in K. Henry IV. P. I.

“They come like sacrifices in their trim.”

STEEVENS.

66. ——old Sir Thomas Erpingham :] Sir Thomas Erpingham came over with Bolingbroke from Bretagne, and was one of the commissioners to receive king Richard's abdication. EDWARDS, MS.

Sir Thomas Erpingham was in Henry V's time warden of Dover castle. His arms are still visible on one side of the Roman pharos. STEEVENS.

76. With casted slough——] Slough is the skin which the serpent annually throws off, and by the change of which he is supposed to regain new vigour and fresh youth. Legerity is lightness, nimbleness. JOHNSON.

So, in Stanyhurst's translation of Virgil, B. IV. 1582 :

“His slough uncasing himself now youthfully bleacheth.”

Legerity is a word used by Ben Jonson in Every Man out of his Humour. STEEVENS.

character of a Sompnour, from which, perhaps, Shakspeare took some hints for his description of Bardolph's face :

“ A Sompnour was ther with us in that place

“ That hadde a fire-red cherubinnes face, &c.

“ —————

“ Ther n'as quicksilver, litarge, ne brimston,

“ Boras, ceruse, ne oile of tartre non,

“ Ne oinement that wolde clense or bite,

“ That might him helpen of his whelkes white,

“ Ne of the knobbes sitting on his chekes.”

See the prologue to the Canterbury Tales, late edit. v. 628, &c. STEEVENS.

500. ——— his fire's out.] This is the last time that any sport can be made with the red face of Bardolph, which, to confess the truth, seems to have taken more hold on Shakspeare's imagination than any other. The conception is very cold to the solitary reader, though it may be somewhat invigorated by the exhibition on the stage. This poet is always more careful about the present than the future, about his audience than his readers. JOHNSON.

508. ——— Enter Montjoy.] Mont-joie is the title of the first king at arms in France, as Garter is in our own country. STEEVENS.

————— by my habit.] That is, by his herald's coat. The person of a herald being inviolable, was distinguished in those times of formality by a peculiar dress, which is likewise yet worn on particular occasions. JOHNSON.

518. ———upon our cue,—] In our turn. This phrase the author learned among players, and has imparted it to kings. JOHNSON.

531. ———so much my office.] This speech, as well as another preceding it, was first compress'd into verse by Mr. Pope. Where he wanted a syllable, he supplied it, and where there were too many for his purpose, he made suitable omissions. Shakspeare (if we may believe some of the old copies) meant both speeches for prose, and as such I have printed them. STEEVENS.

538. ———Without impeachment.] i. e. hindrance. Empechemens, French. STEEVENS.

552. ———God before,——] This was an expression in that age for God being my guide; or, when used to another, God by thy guide. So, in an old dialogue between a herdsman and a maiden going on pilgrimage to Walsingham, the herdsman takes his leave in these words:

“Now, go thy ways, and God before.”

To prevent was used in the same sense. JOHNSON.

554. ———There's for thy labour, Montjoy.] It appears from many ancient books that it was always customary to reward a herald, whether he brought defiance or congratulation. So, in the ancient metrical history of the Battle of Floddon:

“Then gave he to the herald's hand,

“Besides, with it, a rich reward;

“Who hasten'd to his native land

“To see how with his king it far'd.”

STEEVENS.

569. —Scene VII.] This scene is shorter, and I think better, in the first editions of 1600 and 1608; but as the enlargements appear to be author's own, I would not omit them. POPE.

581. —He bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs;—] Alluding to the bounding of tennis-balls, which were stuffed with hair, as appears from Much Ado about Nothing, “And the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuff'd tennis-balls.”

WARBURTON.

589. —he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him,] Thus Cleopatra, speaking of herself,

“I am air and fire; my other elements

“I give to baser life.”

STEEVENS.

592. —and all other jades you may call—beasts.] It is plain that jades and beasts should change places, it being the first word and not the last, which is the term of reproach; as afterwards it is said,

I had as live have my mistress a jade.

WARBURTON.

There is no occasion for this change. In the Second Part of King Henry IV. scene i.

“—— he gave his able horse the head,

“And, bending forward, struck his armed heels

“Against the panting sides of the poor jade.”

Jade is sometimes used for a post horse. Beast is always employed as a contemptuous distinction. So, in Macbeth:

“—— what

“—— what beast was't then

“ That made you break this enterprize to me : ”

Again, in Timon : “—what a wicked beast was I to disfurnish myself against so good a time.”

STEEVENS.

609. ——Wonder of nature——] In the first part of K. Henry VI. act. V. sc. iv. Shakspeare himself uses the phrase which he here seems to ridicule :

“ Be not offended, nature's miracle ! ”

MALONE.

The phrase is only reprehensible through its misapplication. It is surely proper when applied to a woman, but ridiculous indeed when addressed to a horse.

STEEVENS.

622. ——like a kerne of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait trossers.] This word very frequently occurs in the old dramattick writers. A man in The Coxcomb of Beaumont and Fletcher, speaking to an Irish servant, says, “ I'll have thee flead, and trossers made of thy skin, to tumble in.” Trossers appear to have been tight breeches.—The kerns of Ireland anciently rode without breeches, and therefore strait trossers, I believe, means only in their naked skins, which sits close to them. The word is still preserved, but now written trowsers.

STEEVENS.

“ Trowes,” says the explanatory Index to Cox's History of Ireland, “ are breeches and stockings made to fit as close to the body as can be.” Several of the morris-dancers, represented upon the print of my window, have such hose or strait trousers ; but the poet seems seems by the waggish context to have a further meaning. TOLLET.

In Sir John Oldcastle, the word is spelt strouces.

COLLINS.

The following stage direction in Ford's Perkin Warbeck, 1634, shews that the lower Irish were, in the time of our author, described and represented as wearing trowsers.—“Enter at one door four Scotch Anticks accordingly habited. Enter at another door, four wild Irish in trowses, long-haired, and accordingly habited.” Yet our author may have intended an equivoque. MALONE.

654. ——— Who will go to hazard with me for twenty English prisoners?] So, in the old anonymous Henry V.

“Come and you see what me tro at the king's drummer and fife.”

“Faith me will tro at the earl of Northumberland; and, now I will tro at the king himself, &c.”

This incident, however, might have been furnished by the chronicle. STEEVENS.

680. ——— his lacquey:] He has beaten nobody yet but his footboy. JOHNSON.

——— 'tis a hooded valour; and, when it appears, it will bate.] This is said with allusion to falcons which are kept hooded when they are not to fly at game, and, as soon as the hood is off, bait or flap the wing. The meaning is, the Dauphin's valour has never been let loose upon an enemy, yet, when he makes his first essay, we shall see how he will flutter. JOHNSON.

683.

683. ——— I will cap that proverb—] Alluding to the practice of capping verses. JOHNSON.

688. ——— with,—A pox of the devil!] The quartos 1600 and 1608 read—with, a jogge of the devil.

STEEVENS.

699. 'Would it were day!—] Instead of this and the succeeding speeches, the quartos 1600 and 1608 conclude this scene with a couplet:

———— *Come, come away,
The sun is high, and we wear out the day.*

STEEVENS.

717. ——— give them great meals of beef,—] So in K. Edw. III. 1599:

“ ——— but scant them of their chines of beef,
“ And take away their downy featherbeds,” &c.

STEEVENS.

ACT IV.

Line 3. FILLS the wide vessel of the universe.] Universe for horizon: for we are not to think Shakspeare so ignorant as to imagine it was night over the whole globe at once. He intimates he knew otherwise, by that fine line in the Midsummer Night's Dream:

———— following darkness like a dream.

Besides, the image he employs shews he meant but

G

half

half the globe; the horizon round, which has the shape of a vessel or goblet. WARBURTON.

There is a better proof, that Shakspeare knew the order of night and day, in Macbeth:

“ Now o’er one half the world

“ Nature seems dead.”

But there was no great need of any justification. The universe, in its original sense, no more means this globe singly than the circuit of the horizon; but, however large in its philosophical sense, it may be poetically used for as much of the world as falls under observation. Let me remark further, that ignorance cannot be certainly inferred from inaccuracy. Knowledge is not always present. JOHNSON.

The wide vessel of the universe is derived, I apprehend, from a different source than that which Dr. Warburton supposes. Shakspeare in another play stiles night the blanket of the dark: it is probable, that the affinity between blanket and sheet suggested to him the further relation between sheet and vessel, which occurs in the Acts, c. x. v. 11.—“ And saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as if it had been a graet SHEET, knit at the four corners, and let down unto the earth.” HENLEY.

9. —[the other’s umber’d face.] Of this epithet used by Shakspeare in his description of fires reflected by night, Mr. Pope knew the value, and has transplanted it into the Iliad on a like occasion:

“ Whose

“Whose umber'd arms by turns thick flashes send.”

Umbre is a brown colour. So, in As You like It:

“And with a kind of umbre smirch my face.”

The distant visages of the soldiers would certainly appear of this hue when beheld through the light of midnight fires. STEEVENS.

Another interpretation occurs, expressive of the preparation of both armies for an engagement. In Hamlet, act III. Mr. Steevens gives the following quotation from Stowe's Chronicle, “He brast up his umber three times.” Where umber means the vizor of the helmet, as umbriere doth in Spenser, from the French ombre, ombriere, or umbraire, a shadow, an umbrella, or any thing that hides or covers the face. Hence umber'd face may denote a face armed with a helmet, as in K. Henry IV:

“I saw young Harry with his beaver on.”

and in the present play:

“Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,

“And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.”

Beaver here means exactly the same with umber in Stowe. TOLLET.

11. —and from the tents,] See the preparation for the battle between Palamon and Arcite in Chaucer:

“And on the morwe, when the day 'gan spring,

“Of horse and harnesses noise and clattering,

“There was in the hosteliries all about:

“The foamy stedes on the golden bridel

“ Gnawing, and fast the armurers also

“ With file and hammer priking to and fro.”

WARTON.

19. Do the low-rated English play at dice;] i. e. do play them away at dice. WARBURTON.

26. Investing lank-lean cheeks,——] A gesture investing cheeks and coats is nonsense. We should read:

Invest in lank-lean cheeks——

which is sense, i. e. their sad gesture was cloath'd, or set off, in lean cheeks and worn coats. The image is strong and picturesque. WARBURTON.

Yet perhaps even this change is unnecessary. The harshness of the metaphor is what offends, which means only, that their looks are invested in mournful gestures.

Such another harsh metaphor occurs in Much Ado about Nothing:

“ For my part, I am so attir'd in wonder,

“ I know not what to say.” STEEVENS.

Gesture only relates to their cheeks, after which word there should be a comma, as in the first folio. In the second song of Sidney's Astrophel and Stella:

“ Anger invests the face with a lovely grace.”

TOLLET.

The present time runs throughout the whole of the description, except in this instance, where the change seems very improper. I believe we should read with Hanmer, presenteth. STEEVENS.

Investing, perhaps we should read, in fasting, &c.

ANON.

I have

I have no doubt that presenteth, which Mr. Steevens proposes, is the true reading.

If in fasting, which is a most probable conjecture, be admitted, the whole is clear.—Each of these mistakes might easily have happened from a hasty pronunciation, or inattention in the transcriber.

MALONE.

53. Minding true things——] To mind is the same as to call to remembrance. JOHNSON.

63. That we should dress us fairly for our end.] So, in K. Henry IV. P. I.

“They come like sacrifices in their trim.”

STEEVENS.

66. ——old Sir Thomas Erpingham :] Sir Thomas Erpingham came over with Bolingbroke from Bretagne, and was one of the commissioners to receive king Richard's abdication. EDWARDS, MS.

Sir Thomas Erpingham was in Henry V's time warden of Dover castle. His arms are still visible on one side of the Roman pharos. STEEVENS.

76. With casted slough——] Slough is the skin which the serpent annually throws off, and by the change of which he is supposed to regain new vigour and fresh youth. Legerity is lightness, nimbleness. JOHNSON.

So, in Stanyhurst's translation of Virgil, B. IV. 1582 :

“His slough uncasing himself now youthfully bleacheth.”

Legerity is a word used by Ben Jonson in Every Man out of his Humour. STEEVENS.

99. ———an imp of fame:] An imp is a shoot in its primitive sense, but means a son in Shakspeare. In Holinshed, p. 951, the last words of lord Cromwell are preserved, who says, “—and after him that his sonne prince Edward, that godlie impe, may long reigne over you.” STEEVENS.

117. It sorts——] i. e. it agrees. So, in Chapman’s version of the 17th book of the Odyssey:

“His faire long lance well sorting with his hand.” STEEVENS.

125. ———I warrant you, &c.] So, in the laws and ordinances militarie set down by Robert earl of Leicester in the Low Countries printed at Leyden, 1586, one is, that “No man shall make anie outcrie or “noise in any watch ward, ambush, or anie other “place where silence is requisite and necessarie upon “paine of losse of life or lim at the generals discre- “tion.” REED.

158. ———conditions;—] Are qualities. The meaning is, that objects are represented by his senses to him, as to other men by theirs. What is danger to another is danger likewise to him; and, when he feels fear, it is like the fear of meaner mortals.

JOHNSON.

195. Their children rawly left.] That is, without preparation, hastily, suddenly. What is not matured is raw. So, in Macbeth:

“What in this rawness left he wife and children?”

JOHNSON.

5 Rawly

Rawly left, is left young and helpless.

REMARKS.

222. ———native punishment,] That is, punishment in their native country.

REVISAL.

That is such as they are born to if they offend.

STEEVENS.

232. ———Every subject's duty—] This is a very just distinction, and the whole argument is well followed, and properly concluded.

JOHNSON.

254. ———that's a perilous shot out of an elder gun,—] In the old play the thought is more opened. It is a great displeasure that an elder gun can do against a cannon.

JOHNSON.

284. ———twenty French crowns—] This conceit, rather too low for a king, has been already explained, as alluding to the venereal disease.

JOHNSON.

There is surely no necessity for supposing any allusion in this passage to the venereal disease. The conceit here seems to turn merely upon the equivocal sense of crown, which signifies either a coin, or a head.

TYRWHITT.

289. Upon the king! &c.] This beautiful speech was added after the first edition.

POPE.

There is something very striking and solemn in this soliloquy, into which the king breaks immediately as soon as he is left alone. Something like this, on less occasions, every breast has felt. Reflection and seriousness rush upon the mind upon the separation of a gay company, and especially after forced and unwilling merriment.

JOHNSON.

322.

322. —farsed title running, &c.] Farsed is stuffed. The tumid puffy titles with which a king's name is always introduced. This I think is the sense.

JOHNSON.

So, in All for Money, by T. Lupton, 1574:

“ ———belly-gods so swarm,

“ Farced, and flowing with all kind of gall.”

Again:

“ And like a greedy cormorant with belly full farced.”

Again, in Jacob and Esau, 1568:

“ To make both broth and farcing, and that full deinty.”

Again, in Stanyhurst's version of the first book of Virgil:

“ Or eels are farcing with dulce and delicat hoonny.”

Again, in Every Man out of his Humour:

“ ———farce thy lean ribs with it too.”

STEEVENS.

327. Can sleep so soundly, &c.] These lines are exquisitely pleasing. To sweat in the eye of Phæbus, and to sleep in Elysium, are expressions very poetical.

JOHNSON.

351. In former editions:

———take from them now

The sense of reck'ning of th' opposed numbers:

Pluck their hearts from them!———] Thus the first folio. The poet might intend, “ Take from them the sense of reckoning those opposed numbers; which might pluck their courage from them.” But the relative lative not being express'd, the sense is very obscure.

THEOBALD.

Theobald's alteration certainly makes a very good sense; but, I think, we might read, with less deviation from the present text:

——if th' opposed numbers

Pluck their hearts from them.

In conjectural criticism, as in mechanics, the perfection of the art, I apprehend, consists in producing a given effect with the least possible force.

TYRWHITT.

The old reading appears to be right. The king prays that his men may be unable to reckon the enemy's force, that their hearts [i. e. their sense and passions) may be taken from them: that they may be as brave as a total absence of all feeling and recollection can make them. An explanation which seems to be countenanced by the old quarto. A learned friend inclines to think that by—their hearts, the king means the hearts of the opposed numbers.

REMARKS.

365. Since that my penitence comes after all,

Imploring pardon.] I do all this, says the king, though all that I can do is nothing worth, is so far from an adequate expiation of the crime, that penitence comes after all, imploring pardon both for the crime and the expiation.

JOHNSON.

374. Via!—les eaux & la terre.——] Via is an old hortatory exclamation, as allons!

JOHNSON.

So, in K. Edward III. 1599:

“Then Via! for the spacious bounds of France.”

Again,

Again, in the Fawne, by John Marston, 1606:

“Come Via! to this feastful entertainment!”

Again, in Marston's What you Will, 1607:

“Tut, Via! let all run glib and square!”

STEEVENS.

382. And daunt them——] The first folio reads doubt, which, perhaps, may have been used for to make to doubt; to terrify.

TYRWHITT.

406. The tucket-sonuance, &c.] The tucket-sonuance was, I believe, the name of an introductory flourish on the trumpet, as tocatta in Italian is the prelude of a sonata on the harpsichord, and toccar la tromba is to blow the trumpet.

In the Spanish tragedy (no date) “a tucket afar off.” Again, in the Devil's Lawcase, 1623:

“2 tuckets by several trumpets.”

Sonance is a word used by Haywood, in his Rape of Lucrece, 1630:

“Or if he chance to endure our tongues so much

“As but to hear their sonance.” STEEVENS.

416. Their horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks,

With torch-staves in their hand;] Grandpré alludes to the form of the ancient candlesticks, which frequently represented human figures holding the sockets for the lights in their extended hands.

A similar image occurs in Vittoria Corombona, 1612: “—he shew'd like a pewter candlestick, fashioned like a man in armour, holding a tilting staff in his hand little bigger than a candle.” STEEVENS.

420. ——gimmal bit——] Gimmal is, in the western tern tern counties, a ring; a gimmel bit is therefore a bit of which the parts play'd one within another.

JOHNSON.

I meet with the word, though differently spelt, in the old play of The Reign of King Edward the Third, 1596:

“Nor lay aside their jacks of gymold mail.”

Gymold or gimmel'd mail, means armour composed of links like those of a chain, which by its flexibility fitted itself to the shape of the body more exactly than defensive covering of any other contrivance. There was a suit of it to be seen in the Tower. Spenser, in his Faerie Queene, B. I. cap. v. calls it woven mail:

“In woven mail all armed warily.”

In Lingua, &c. 1607, is mentioned:

“——a gimmel ring with one link hanging.”

STEEVENS.

422. ——their executors, the knavish crows,—] The crows who are to have the disposal of what they shall leave, their hides and their flesh. JOHNSON.

431. I stay but for my guard;——] It seems, by what follows, that guard, in this place, means rather something of ornament or of distinction than a body of attendants. JOHNSON.

The following quotation from Holinshed, p. 554, will best elucidate this passage——“The duke of Brabant, when his standard was not come, caused a banner to be taken from a trumpet and fastened upon a spear, the which he commanded to be borne before him instead of a standard.”

In

In the second part of Heywood's Iron Age, 1632, Menelaus, after having enumerated to Pyrrhus the treasures of his father Achilles, as his myrmidons, &c. adds :

“ His sword, spurs, armours, guard, pavilion.”

From this passage it should appear that the guard was part of the defensive armour ; perhaps what we call at present the gorget.

Again, in Holinshed, p. 820.

“ The one bare his helmet, the second his gran-guard,” &c.

STEEVENS.

Perhaps, instead of,

I stay but for my guard ; on, to the field :

We should read :

I stay but for my guidon ;—to the field !

This conjecture is proposed with the more confidence, as I have been informed that it occurred also to the late Mr. Carter of Tunstal. In support of it may be added, what immediately follows :—

“ I will the banner from a trumpet take,

“ And use it for my haste.—”

And also, that :—To the field! is the word for marching used by Hotspur.—

Since the foregoing note was written, I find the word of command as given by Hotspur in his sleep, is preceded by an adhortation corresponding to On :—

“ Courage, to the field!” which leads me to suppose that guard may be synonymous with guidon. It is evident that it bears this sense in the passage before us,
and

and is so explained by the word standard in Holinshed, as cited by Mr. Steevens. HENLEY.

445. In the old edition :

Bed. Farewel, good Salisbury ; and good luck go with thee :

And yet I do thee wrong, to mind thee of it,

For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour.

Exe. Farewel, kind lord ; fight valiantly to-day.

What ! does he do Salisbury wrong to wish him good luck ? The ingenious Dr. Thirlby prescribed to me the transposition of the verses, which I have made in the text : and the old quartos plainly lead to such a regulation. THEOBALD.

I believe Mr. Theobald's transposition to be perfectly right, for it was already made in the quartos 1600 and 1608, as follows :

Farewel, kind lord ; fight valiantly to-day,

And yet in truth I do thee wrong,

For thou art made on the true sparkes of honour.

STEEVENS.

455. My cousin Westmoreland ?——] In the quartos 1600 and 1608, this speech is addressed to Warwick.

STEEVENS.

460. By Jove,——] The king prays like a christian, and swears like a heathen. JOHNSON.

476. ——of Crispian :] The battle of Agincourt was fought upon the 25th of October, St. Crispin's day : the legend upon which this is founded, follows :
“ Crispinus and Crispianus were brethren, born at Rome ; from whence they travelled to Soissons in

H

France

99. ———an imp of fame:] An imp is a shoot in its primitive sense, but means a son in Shakspeare. In Holinshed, p. 951, the last words of lord Cromwell are preserved, who says, “—and after him that his sonne prince Edward, that godlie impe, may long reigne over you.” STEEVENS.

117. It sorts——] i. e. it agrees. So, in Chapman’s version of the 17th book of the Odyssey:

“His faire long lance well sorting with his hand.” STEEVENS.

125. ———I warrant you, &c.] So, in the laws and ordinances militarie set down by Robert earl of Leicester in the Low Countries printed at Leyden, 1586, one is, that “No man shall make anie outcrie or “noise in any watch ward, ambush, or anie other “place where silence is requisite and necessarie upon “paine of losse of life or lim at the generals discretion.” REED.

158. ———conditions;—] Are qualities. The meaning is, that objects are represented by his senses to him, as to other men by theirs. What is danger to another is danger likewise to him; and, when he feels fear, it is like the fear of meaner mortals.

JOHNSON.

195. Their children rawly left.] That is, without preparation, hastily, suddenly. What is not matured is raw. So, in Macbeth:

“What in this rawness left he wife and children?”

JOHNSON.

5 Rawly

Rawly left, is left young and helpless.

REMARKS.

222. ———native punishment,] That is, punishment in their native country.

REVISAL.

That is such as they are born to if they offend.

STEEVENS.

232. ———Every subject's duty—] This is a very just distinction, and the whole argument is well followed, and properly concluded.

JOHNSON.

254. ———that's a perilous shot out of an elder gun,—] In the old play the thought is more opened. It is a great displeasure that an elder gun can do against a cannon.

JOHNSON.

284. ———twenty French crowns—] This conceit, rather too low for a king, has been already explained, as alluding to the venereal disease.

JOHNSON.

There is surely no necessity for supposing any allusion in this passage to the venereal disease. The conceit here seems to turn merely upon the equivocal sense of crown, which signifies either a coin, or a head.

TYRWHITT.

289. Upon the king! &c.] This beautiful speech was added after the first edition.

POPE.

There is something very striking and solemn in this soliloquy, into which the king breaks immediately as soon as he is left alone. Something like this, on less occasions, every breast has felt. Reflection and seriousness rush upon the mind upon the separation of a gay company, and especially after forced and unwilling merriment.

JOHNSON.

322.

322. —farsed title running, &c.] Farsed is stuffed. The tumid puffy titles with which a king's name is always introduced. This I think is the sense.

JOHNSON.

So, in All for Money, by T. Lupton, 1574:

“ ———belly-gods so swarm,

“ Farced, and flowing with all kind of gall.”

Again:

“ And like a greedy cormorant with belly full farced.”

Again, in Jacob and Esau, 1568:

“ To make both broth and farcing, and that full deinty.”

Again, in Stanyhurst's version of the first book of Virgil:

“ Or eels are farcing with dulce and delicat hoonny.”

Again, in Every Man out of his Humour:

“ ———farce thy lean ribs with it too.”

STEEVENS.

327. Can sleep so soundly, &c.] These lines are exquisitely pleasing. To sweat in the eye of Phæbus, and to sleep in Elysium, are expressions very poetical.

JOHNSON.

351. In former editions:

———take from them now

The sense of reck'ning of th' opposed numbers:

Pluck their hearts from them!———] Thus the first folio. The poet might intend, “ Take from them the sense of reckoning those opposed numbers; which might pluck their courage from them.” But the relative lative not being express'd, the sense is very obscure.

THEOBALD.

Theobald's alteration certainly makes a very good sense; but, I think, we might read, with less deviation from the present text:

——if th' opposed numbers

Pluck their hearts from them.

In conjectural criticism, as in mechanics, the perfection of the art, I apprehend, consists in producing a given effect with the least possible force.

TYRWHITT.

The old reading appears to be right. The king prays that his men may be unable to reckon the enemy's force, that their hearts [i. e. their sense and passions) may be taken from them: that they may be as brave as a total absence of all feeling and recollection can make them. An explanation which seems to be countenanced by the old quarto. A learned friend inclines to think that by—their hearts, the king means the hearts of the opposed numbers.

REMARKS.

365. Since that my penitence comes after all,

Imploring pardon.] I do all this, says the king, though all that I can do is nothing worth, is so far from an adequate expiation of the crime, that penitence comes after all, imploring pardon both for the crime and the expiation.

JOHNSON.

374. Via!—les eaux & la terre.——] Via is an old hortatory exclamation, as allons!

JOHNSON.

So, in K. Edward III. 1599:

“Then Via! for the spacious bounds of France.”

Again,

Again, in the Fawne, by John Marston, 1606:

“Come Via! to this feastful entertainment!”

Again, in Marston's What you Will, 1607:

“Tut, Via! let all run glib and square!”

STEEVENS.

382. And daunt them——] The first folio reads doubt, which, perhaps, may have been used for to make to doubt; to terrify. TYRWHITT.

406. The tucket-sonuance, &c.] The tucket-sonuance was, I believe, the name of an introductory flourish on the trumpet, as tocatta in Italian is the prelude of a sonata on the harpsichord, and toccar la tromba is to blow the trumpet.

In the Spanish tragedy (no date) “a tucket afar off.” Again, in the Devil's Lawcase, 1623:

“2 tuckets by several trumpets.”

Sonance is a word used by Haywood, in his Rape of Lucrece, 1630:

“Or if he chance to endure our tongues so much

“As but to hear their sonance.” STEEVENS.

416. Their horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks, With torch-staves in their hand;] Grandpré alludes to the form of the ancient candlesticks, which frequently represented human figures holding the sockets for the lights in their extended hands.

A similar image occurs in Vittoria Corombona, 1612: “—he shew'd like a pewter candlestick, fashioned like a man in armour, holding a tilting staff in his hand little bigger than a candle.” STEEVENS.

420. ——gimmal bit——] Gimmal is, in the western tern counties, a ring; a gimmel bit is therefore a bit of which the parts play'd one within another.

JOHNSON.

I meet with the word, though differently spelt, in the old play of The Reign of King Edward the Third, 1596:

“Nor lay aside their jacks of gymold mail.”

Gymold or gimmel'd mail, means armour composed of links like those of a chain, which by its flexibility fitted itself to the shape of the body more exactly than defensive covering of any other contrivance. There was a suit of it to be seen in the Tower. Spenser, in his Faerie Queene, B. I. cap. v. calls it woven mail:

“In woven mail all armed warily.”

In Lingua, &c. 1607, is mentioned:

“——a gimmel ring with one link hanging.”

STEEVENS.

422. ——their executors, the knavish crows,——] The crows who are to have the disposal of what they shall leave, their hides and their flesh. JOHNSON.

431. I stay but for my guard;——] It seems, by what follows, that guard, in this place, means rather something of ornament or of distinction than a body of attendants. JOHNSON.

The following quotation from Holinshed, p. 554, will best elucidate this passage——“The duke of Brabant, when his standard was not come, caused a banner to be taken from a trumpet and fastened upon a spear, the which he commanded to be borne before him instead of a standard.”

In

In the second part of Heywood's Iron Age, 1632, Menelaus, after having enumerated to Pyrrhus the treasures of his father Achilles, as his myrmidons, &c. adds :

“ His sword, spurs, armours, guard, pavilion.”

From this passage it should appear that the guard was part of the defensive armour ; perhaps what we call at present the gorget.

Again, in Holinshed, p. 820.

“ The one bare his helmet, the second his gran-guard,” &c. STEEVENS.

Perhaps, instead of,

I stay but for my guard ; on, to the field :

We should read :

I stay but for my guidon ;—to the field !

This conjecture is proposed with the more confidence, as I have been informed that it occurred also to the late Mr. Carter of Tunstal. In support of it may be added, what immediately follows :—

“ I will the banner from a trumpet take,

“ And use it for my haste.—”

And also, that :—To the field! is the word for marching used by Hotspur.—

Since the foregoing note was written, I find the word of command as given by Hotspur in his sleep, is preceded by an adhortation corresponding to On :—

“ Courage, to the field!” which leads me to suppose that guard may be synonymous with guidon. It is evident that it bears this sense in the passage before us,
and

and is so explained by the word standard in Holinshed, as cited by Mr. Steevens. HENLEY.

445. In the old edition :

Bed. Farewel, good Salisbury ; and good luck go with thee :

*And yet I do thee wrong, to mind thee of it,
For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour.*

Exe. Farewel, kind lord ; fight valiantly to-day.

What ! does he do Salisbury wrong to wish him good luck ? The ingenious Dr. Thirlby prescribed to me the transposition of the verses, which I have made in the text : and the old quartos plainly lead to such a regulation. THEOBALD.

I believe Mr. Theobald's transposition to be perfectly right, for it was already made in the quartos 1600 and 1608, as follows :

*Farewel, kind lord ; fight valiantly to-day,
And yet in truth I do thee wrong,
For thou art made on the true sparkes of honour.*

STEEVENS.

455. My cousin Westmoreland ?——] In the quartos 1600 and 1608, this speech is addressed to Warwick.

STEEVENS.

460. By Jove,——] The king prays like a christian, and swears like a heathen. JOHNSON.

476. ——of Crispian :] The battle of Agincourt was fought upon the 25th of October, St. Crispin's day : the legend upon which this is founded, follows :
“ Crispinus and Crispianus were brethren, born at Rome ; from whence they travelled to Soissons in France, about the year 303, to propogate the christian religion ; but because they would not be chargeable to others for their maintenance, they exercised the trade of shoemakers ; but the governor of the town discovering them to be christians, ordered them to be beheaded about the year 303. From which time the shoemakers made choice of them for their tutelar saints." Wheatley's Rational Illustration, folio edit. p. 76. See Hall's Chronicle, fol. 47. GREY.

H

France

485. ———with advantages,] Old men, notwithstanding the natural forgetfulness of age, shall remember their feats of this day, and remember to tell them with advantage. Age is commonly boastful, and inclined to magnify past acts and past times. JOHNSON.

493. — From this day to the ending——] It may be observed that we are apt to promise to ourselves a more lasting memory than the changing state of human things admits. This prediction is not verified ; the feast of Crispin passes by without any mention of Agincourt. Late events obliterate the former : the civil wars have left in this nation scarcely any tradition of more ancient history. JOHNSON.

498. ———gentle his condition.:] This day shall advance him to the rank of a gentleman. JOHNSON.

King Henry V. inhibited any person but such as had a right by inheritance, or grant, to assume coats of arms, except those who fought with him at the battle of Agincourt ; and, I think, these last were allowed the chief seats of honour at all feasts and public meetings. TOLLET.

502. ———upon St. Crispin's day.] This speech, like many others of the declamatory kind, is too long. Had it been contracted to about half the number of lines, it might have gained force, and lost none of the sentiments.

JOHNSON.

504. ———bravely———] Is splendidly, ostentatiously.

JOHNSON.

505. ———expedience———] i. e. expedition.

STEEVENS.

508. ———thou hast unwish'd five thousand men,———] By wishing only thyself and me, thou hast wished five thousand men away. Shakspeare never thinks of such trifles as numbers. In the last scene the French are said to be full threescore thousand, which Exeter declares to be five to one; but, by the king's account, they are twelve to one.

JOHNSON.

Holinshed makes the English army consist of 15,000, and the French of 60,000 horse, besides foot, &c. in all 100,000; while Walsingham and Harding represent the English as but 9000; and other authors say that the number of French amounted to 150,000.

STEEVENS.

531. A many———] Thus the folio; the quarto——— and many———

STEEVENS.

540. Mark then abounding valour in our English;] Thus the old folios. The quartos, more erroneously still:

Mark then abundant———

Mr. Pope degraded the passage in both his editions, because, I presume, he did not understand it. I have reformed

H ij

reformed the text, and the allusion is exceedingly beautiful; comparing the revival of the English valour to the rebounding of a cannon-ball.

THEOBALD.

543. Killing in relapse of mortality.] What is it to kill in relapse of mortality? I do not know. I suspect that it should be read:

Killing in reliques of mortality.

That is, continuing to kill when they are the reliques that death has left behind it.

That the allusion is, as Mr. Theobald thinks, exceedingly beautiful, I am afraid few readers will discover. The valour of a putrid body, that destroys by the stench, is one of the thoughts that do no great honour to the poet. Perhaps from this putrid valour Dryden might borrow the posthumous empire of Don Sebastian, who was to reign wheresoever his atoms should be scattered.

JOHNSON.

By this phrase, however uncouth, Shakspeare seems to mean the same as in the preceding line. Mortality is death. So, in K. Henry VI. Part I.

“——— I beg mortality

“ Rather than life.———”

Relapse may be used for rebound. Shakspeare has given mind of honour, for honourable mind; and by the same rule might write relapse of mortality for fatal or mortal rebound; or by relapse of mortality, he may mean—after they had relapsed into inanimation.

STEEVENS.

This putrid valour is common to the descriptions of other poets as well as Shakspeare and Dryden, and is predicated predicated to be no less victorious by Lucan, lib. vii. v. 821.

“ Quid fugis hanc cladem, quid olentes deseris agros ?

“ Has trahe Cæsar, aquas ; hoc, si potes utere cœlo.

“ Sed tibi tabentes populi Pharsalica rura

“ Eripiunt, camposque tenent victore fugato.”

Corneille has imitated this passage in the first speech in his Pompée

“ ———de chars,

“ Sur ses champs empestés confusément épars,

“ Ces montagnes de morts privés d’honneurs suprêmes,

“ Que la nature force à se venger eux-mêmes,

“ Et de leurs troncs pourris exhale dans les vents

“ De quoi faire la guerre au reste des vivans.”

Voltaire, in his letter to the academy of Belles Lettres at Paris, opposes the preceding part of this speech to a quotation from Shakspeare. The Frenchman, however, very prudently stopped before he came to the lines which are here quoted. STEEVENS.

545. ———warriors for the working day:] We are soldiers but coarsely dressed ; we have not on our holiday apparel, JOHNSON.

546. ———our gilt———] i. e. Golden show, superficial gilding. Obsolete. So, in Timon :

“ When thou wast in thy gilt, and thy perfume,”
&c.

Again, in another of our author’s plays :

“ The double gilt of this opportunity you let time wash off.”

Again, in Arden of Feversham, 1592:

“ And now the rain hath beaten off thy gilt.”

STEEVENS.

573. ———discuss.] This affected word is used by Lylly in his Woman in the Moon, 1597:

But first I must discuss this heavenly cloud.”

STEEVENS.

575. ———signieur Dew should be a gentleman.] I cannot help thinking, that Shakspeare intended here a stroke at a passage in a famous old book, call'd, The Gentleman's Academie in Hawking, Hunting, and Armoric, written originally by Juliana Barnes, and re-published by Gervase Markham, 1595. The first chapter of the Booke of Armorie, is, the difference 'twixt Churles and Gentlemen;" and it ends thus: "From the of-spring of gentlemanly Japhet came Abraham, Moyes, Aaron, and the Prophets; and also the king of the right line of Mary, of whom that only absolute gentleman, Jesus, was borne :—gentleman, by his mother Mary, princesse of coat armor." FARMER.

577. ———thou dy'st on point of fox,] Fox is no more than an old cant word for a sword:

“ I made my father's old fox fly about his ears.”

Beaumont and Fletcher's Philaster.

The same expression occurs in The two angry Women of Abington, 1599:

“ I had a sword, ay the flower of Smithfield for a sword; a right fox i'faith.”

Again,

Again, in The Devil's Charter, 1607:

“ And by this awful cross upon my blade,

“ And by this fox which stinks of Pagan blood.”

STEEVENS.

582. For I will fetch thy rim——] This line is wanting in the quartos 1600 and 1608. The folio reads, thy rhyme. It appears, however, from sir Arthur George's Translation of Lucan, 1614, that some part of the intestines was anciently called the rimme, Lucan. B. I.

“ The slender rimme too weake to part

“ The boyling livar from the heart——”

———parvusque secant vitalia limes. L. 623.

“ Parvus limes (says one of the scholiasts) præcordia indicat; membrana illa quæ cor et pulmones a jecore et liene dirimit.” I believe it is now called the diaphragm in human creatures, and the skirt or midriff in beasts; but still in some places, the rim.

Phil. Holland, in his translation of Pliny's Nat. Hist. several times mentions the rim of the paunch, See B. XXVIII. ch. ix. p. 321, &c. STEEVENS.

586. Brass cur!——] Either Shakspeare had very little knowledge in the French language, or his over-fondness for punning led him in this place, contrary to his own judgment, into an error. Almost every one knows that the French word bras is pronounced brau; and what resemblance of sound does this bear to brass, that Pistol should reply Brass cur? The joke would appear to a reader, but would scarce be discovered in the performance of the play.

Sir W. RAWLINSON.

If the pronunciation of the French language be not changed since Shakspeare's time, which is not unlikely, it may be suspected some other man wrote the French scenes.

JOHNSON.

Dr. Johnson makes a doubt, whether the pronunciation of the French language may not be changed since Shakspeare's time; "if not," says he, "it may be suspected that some other man wrote the French scenes;" but this does not appear to be the case, at least in this termination from the rules of the grammarians, or the practice of the poets. I am certain of the former from the French Alphabeth of De la Mothe, and the Orthoepia Gallica of John Eliot; and of the latter from the rhymes of Marot, Ronsard, and Du Bartas.—Connections of this kind were very common. Shakspeare himself assisted Ben Jonson in his Scianus as it was originally written; and Fletcher in his Two Noble Kinsmen.

FARMER.

587. ———luxurious mountain goat] Luxurious means lascivious.

STEEVENS.

590. ———a ton of moys?] Moys is a piece of money, whence moi d'or, or moi, of gold.

JOHNSON.

596. ———and firk him.——] The word firk is so variously used by the old writers, that it is almost impossible to ascertain its precise meaning. On this occasion it may mean to chastise. So, in Ram-Alley, or Merry Tricks, 1611:

" —————nay, I will firk

" My silly novice, as he was never firk'd

" Since midwives bound his noddle."

In

In Beaumont and Fletcher's Rule a Wife, &c. it means to collect by low and dishonest industry :

“ ———these five years she has firk'd

“ A pretty living.”

Again, in Ram-Alley, it seems to be employed in the sense of—quibble :

“ Sir, leave this firk of law, or by this light,”
&c.

In the Alchemist, it is obscenely used. STEEVENS.

637. ———this roaring devil i' the old play,——] In modern puppet-shows, which seem to be copied from the old farces, punch sometimes fights the devil, and always overcomes him. I suppose the vice of the old farce, to whom punch succeeds, used to fight the devil with a wooden dagger. JOHNSON.

———like this roaring devil in the old play ;] This is perhaps a sneer at the old play of Henry the Fifth, which I have mentioned before. There is in it a character called Derick, who behaves to him just as Pistol does in the scene before us. The first time Derick makes his appearance, he enters roaring, (one of the editions reads rouing) and throughout the piece, utters an oath with almost every line he speaks.

The devil, however, in the old mysteries, is as turbulent and vain-glorious as Pistol. So, in one of the Coventry Whitsun Plays, preserved in the British Museum. Vespasian. D. VIII. p. 136.

“ I am your lord Lucifer that out of helle cam, “ Prince of this world, and gret duke of helle ;

“ Wherefore

“ Wherefore my name is clepyd ser Satan,

“ Whech aperyth among you a mater to spelle.”

And perhaps the character was always performed in the most clamorous manner. STEEVENS.

652. O perdurable shame!—] Perdurable is lasting, long to continue. So, in Daniel’s Civil Wars, &c.

“ Triumphant arcs of perdurable might.”

STEEVENS.

656. Let us die instant :—Once more back again ;]

This verse, which is quite left out in Mr. Pope’s editions, stands imperfect in the first folio. By the addition of a syllable, I think I have retrieved the poet’s sense. It is thus in the old copy :

Let us die in once more back again. THEOBALD.

I rather think, the word omitted in the first folio at the press, was fight, or arms :

Let us die in fight :—Once more back again, &c.

So, in Macbeth :

“ At least we’ll die with harness on our backs.”

The quarto reads,

A plague of order !—once more to the field,

And he, &c.

The second, and all the subsequent folios,

Let us fly in once more back again. MALONE.

659. Like a base pander,—] The quartos read,

Like a base leno,— STEEVENS.

664. Unto these English, or else die with fame.] This line I have restored from the quartos 1600 and 1608.

The constable of France is throughout the play represented sented as a brave and generous enemy, and therefore we should not deprive him of a resolution which agrees so well with his character. STEEVENS.

696. A testament of noble-ending love.] The quarto reads,

An argument of never-ending love. MALONE.

But all my mother came into mine eyes,

700. And gave me up to tears.] This thought is apparently copied by Milton, Par. Lost, b. xi.

“ ———compassion quell’d

“ His best of man, and gave him up to tears.”

STEEVENS.

Dryden also, in All for Love, a 1. has the same expression.

“ Look, Emperor, this is no common dew,

“ I have not wept this forty years ; but now

“ My mother comes afresh into my eyes ;

“ I cannot help her softness.”

REED.

Does not mother here signify that convulsive emotion occasioned by insuppressible grief ?

Thus, in Lear :

“ O, how this mother swells up toward my heart !

“ Hysterica passio ! down thou climbing sorrow,

“ Thy element’s below !———” HENLEY.

708. Give the word through.] Here the quartos 1600 and 1608 add, Pist. Couper gorge.

STEEVENS.

709. Scene VII.] Here in the other editions, they begin the fourth act very absurdly, since both the place place and time evidently continue, and the words of Fluellen immediately follow those of the king just before.

POPE.

Kill the poyes and the luggage! 'tis expressly against the law of arms:] In the old folios, the 4th act is made to begin here. But as the matter of the Chorus, which is to come betwixt the 4th and 5th acts, will by no means sort with the scenery that here follows, I have chose to fall in with the other regulation. Mr. Pope gives a reason why this scene should be connective to the preceding scene; but his reason, according to custom, is a mistaken one. “The words of Fluellen,” says he, “immediately follow those of the king just before.” The king’s last words, at his going off, were:

Then ev’ry soldier kill his prisoners:

Give the word through.

Now Mr. Pope must very accurately suppose, that Fluellen overhears this; and that by replying, Kill the poyes and the luggage! 'tis expressly against the law of arms;—he is condemning the king’s order, as against martial discipline. But this is a most absurd supposition. Fluellen neither overhears, nor replies to, what the King had said; nor has kill the poyes and the luggage any reference to the soldiers killing their prisoners; nay, on the contrary (as there is no interval of an act here), there must be some little pause betwixt the king’s going off, and Fluellen’s entering (and therefore I have said, Alarms continued); for we find by Gower’s first speech, that the soldiers had already cut their prisoners throats, which required some time to do. The matter matter is this: The baggage during the battle (as King Henry had no men to spare) was guarded only by boys and lacqueys; which some French run-aways getting notice of, they came down upon the English camp-boys, whom they kill'd and plundered, and burn'd the baggage; in resentment of which villany it was, that the king, contrary to his wonted lenity, ordered all prisoners' throats to be cut. And to this villany of the French run-aways, Fluellen si alluding, when he says, Kill the poyes and the luggage! The fact is set out (as Mr. Pope might have observed) both by Hall and Holinshed.

THEOBALD.

Unhappily the king gives one reason for his order to kill the prisoners, and Gower another. The king killed his prisoners because he expected another battle, and he had not men sufficient to guard one army and fight another. Gower declares that the gallant king has worthily ordered the prisoners to be destroyed, because the luggage was plundered, and the boys were slain.

JOHNSON.

754. — As Alexander, &c.] I should suspect that Shakspeare, who was well read in Sir Thomas North's translation of Plutarch, meant these speeches of Fluellen, as a ridicule on the parallels of the Greek author, in which, circumstances common to all men are assembled in opposition, and one great action is forced into comparison with another, though as totally different in themselves, as was the behaviour of Harry Monmouth from that of Alexander the Great.

STEEVENS.

757. ———the fat knight———] This is the last time that Falstaff can make sport. The poet was loath to part with him, and has continued his memory as long as he could.

JOHNSON.

770. And make them skir away,———] This word has already occur'd in Macbeth.

STEVENS.

772. Besides, we'll cut the throats, &c.] The king is in a very bloody disposition. He has already cut the throats of his prisoners, and threatens now to cut them again. No haste of composition could produce such negligence; neither was this play, which is the second draught of the same design, written in haste. There must be some dislocation of the scenes. If we place these lines at the beginning of the twelfth scene, the absurdity will be removed, and the action will proceed in a regular series. This transposition might easily happen in copies written for the players. Yet it must not be concealed, that in the imperfect play of 1608 the order of the scenes is the same as here.

JOHNSON.

The difference of the two copies may be thus accounted for. The elder was, perhaps taken down, during the representation, by the contrivance of some bookseller who was in haste to publish it; or it might with equal probability, have been collected from the repetitions of actors invited to a tavern for that purpose. The manner in which many of the scenes are printed adds strength to the supposition; for in these a single line is generally divided into two, that the quantity of the play might be seemingly increased.—The second and more ample edition edition may be that which regularly belonged to the playhouse ; and yet with equal confidence we may pronounce, that every dramattick composition would materially suffer, if only transmitted to the publick through the medium of ignorance, presumption, and caprice, those common attendants on a theatre. STEEVENS.

There is no difference, that I can find, in the two copies. Both the quarto and the folio has these lines.

MALONE.

790. Yerk out their armed hecl,—] So, in The Weakest goes to the Wall, 1618 :

“ Their neighing gennets, armed to the field,

“ Do yerke and fling, and beat the sullen ground.”

STEEVENS.

812. ———Monmouth caps ;——] Monmouth caps were formerly much worn. From the following stanza in an old ballad of the caps, printed in The Antidote against Melancholy 1661, p. 31. it appears they were particularly worn by soldiers :

“ The soldiers that the Monmouth wear

“ On castles tops their ensigns rear.

“ The seamen with the thrumb doth stand

“ On higher parts than all the land.”

REED.

To this Mr. Reed might have added, that these caps are still the common wear of seamen. * * *

848. ———great sort,——] High rank. So, in the ballad of Jane Shore :

“ Lords and ladies of great sort.”

JOHNSON.

The quartos 1600 and 1608 read,

I ij

——his

—his enemy may be a gentleman of worth.

STEEVENS.

848. —quite from the answer of his degree.] A man of such station as is not bound to hazard his person to answer to a challenge from one of the soldiers low degree.

JOHNSON.

910. —into plows,—] The Revisal reads, very plausibly,

“ in two plows.”

JOHNSON.

The quarto reads, I will give treason his due presently. We might therefore read—in due plows, i. e. in the beating that is so well his due.

Fuller, in his Church History, p. 139, speaks of the task-masters of Israel, “ on whose back the number of bricks wanting were only scored in blows.”

STEEVENS.

The Scotch, both in speaking and in writing, frequently use into for in. However, if it should be thought necessary to amend the text, the readiest way would be to omit a syllable, and read—in plows.

REMARKS.

935. Give me thy glove—Look, here is the fellow of it.]

The king, by “ thy glove,” meant—the glove that thou hast now in thy cap, i. e. Henry’s Glove.

MALONE.

970. —Charles Duke of Orleans, &c.] This list is copied from Hall.

POPE.

982. —sixteen hundred mercenaries;] Mercenaries are in this place common soldiers, or hired soldiers. The gentlemen served at their own charge in consequence of their tenures.

JOHNSON.

986.

986. Charles De-la-bret,] De-la-bret, as is already observed, should be Charles D'Albert, would the measure permit of such a change. Holinshed sometimes apologizes for the omission of foreign names, on account of his inability to spell them, but always calls this nobleman "the lord de la Breth, constable of France." See, p. 549, and p. 555, &c. STEEVENS.

997. Edward the duke of York,—] This speech, which in the quartos is given to Exeter, appears in the folio as part of the king's. STEEVENS.

1018. Do we all holy rites;] The king (say the Chronicles) caused the Psalm, In exitu Israel de Ægypto (in which, according to the vulgate, is included the Psalm, Non nobis, Domine, &c.) to be sung after the victory. POPE.

ACT V.

Line 12. —A MIGHTY whiffler—] An officer who walks first in processions, or before persons in high stations, on occasions of ceremony. The name is still retained in London; and there is an officer so called that walks before their companies at times of publick solemnity. It seems a corruption from the French word huissier. HANMER.

—a mighty whiffler—] See Mr. Warton's note to the tragedy of Othello, act iii, sc. ii.

In the play of Clyomon, Knight of the Golden Shield, &c. 159, a whiffler makes his appearance at a tournament, clearing the way before the king. In Westward Hoe, by Decker and Webster, 1612, the term is often mentioned. Again, in Monsieur D'Olive, 1606:

“I can go into no corner, but I meet with some of my whiffers in their accoutrements; you may hear them half a mile ere they come at you.”

“——I am afraid of nothing but that I shall be balladed, I and all my whiffers.”

Again, in Westward Hoe, 1607:

“The torch-men and whiffers had an item to receive him.”

Again, in TEXNOTAMIA, 1618:

“Tobacco is a whiffler,

“And cries huff snuff with furie:

“His pipe’s his club and linke,” &c.

Again, in The Isle of Gulls, 1633:

“And Manasses shall go before like a whiffler, and make way with his horns.”

STEEVENS.

21. Giving full trophy,——] Transferring all the honours of conquest, all trophies, tokens, and shews, from himself to God.

JOHNSON.

26. Like to the senators of antique Rome,] This is a very extraordinary compliment to the city. But he ever declines all general satire on them; and in the epilogue to Henry VIII. he hints with disapprobation on his contemporary poets, who were accustomed to abuse them. Indeed, his satire is very rarely partial and licentious.

WARBURTON.

29. ———likelihood] Likelihood for similitude.

WARBURTON.

The later editors, in hope of mending the measure of this line, have injured the sense. The folio reads as I have printed; but all the books, since revisal became fashionable, and editors have been more diligent to display themselves than to illustrate their author, have given the line thus:

“As by a low, but loving likelihood.”

Thus they have destroyed the praise which the poet designed for Essex; for who would think himself honoured by the epithet low? The poet desirous to celebrate that great man, whose popularity was then his boast, and afterwards his destruction, compares him to king Harry; but being afraid to offend the rival courtiers, or perhaps the queen herself, he confesses that he is lower than a king, but would never have represented him absolutely, as low. JOHNSON.

30. Were now the general, &c.] The earl of Essex, in the reign of queen Elizabeth. POPE.

32. Bringing rebellion broached——] Spitted, transfixed. JOHNSON.

46. Enter Fluellen and Gower.] This scene ought, in my opinion, to conclude the fourth act, and be placed before the last chorus. There is no English camp in this act; the quarrel apparently happened before the return of the army to England, and not after so long an interval as the chorus has supplied.

JOHNSON.

Fluellen presently says, that he wore his leek in consequence sequence of an affront he had received but the day before from Pistol. Their present quarrel has therefore no reference to that begun in the sixth scene of the third act. STEEVENS.

64. To have me fold up, &c.] Dost thou desire to have me put thee to death. JOHNSON.

80. ———a squire of low degree.] This alludes to an old metrical romance, which was very popular among our countrymen in ancient times, intitled, The Squire of low Degree. It was burlesqued by Chaucer in his rhyme of Sir Thopas, and begins thus:

“It was a squyre of low degre

“That loved the king’s daughter of Hungre.”

See Reliques of English Poetry, vol. iii. p. 30. 2d edit.

PERCY.

83. ———astonish’d him.] i. e. you have stunned him with the blow. JOHNSON.

92. I eat, and eat, I swear——] Thus the first folio, for which the late editors have put, I eat and swear. We should read, I suppose, in the frigid tumour of Pistol’s dialect:

“I eat and eke I swear.”

JOHNSON.

120. gleeking——] i. e. scoffing, sneering.

STEEVENS.

126. Doth fortune play the huswife——] i. e. the jilt.

Huswife is here in an ill sense.

JOHNSON.

127. News have I, that my Dol is dead——] We must read, my Nell is dead. Dol Tearsheet was so little the favourite of Pistol, that he offered her in contempt to Nym. Nor would her death have cut off his his rendezvous; i. e. deprived him of a home. Perhaps the poet forgot his plan. In the quartos of 1600 and 1608, these lines are read thus:

“Doth fortune play the huswye with me now?

“Is honour cudgel’d from my warlike lines?

“Well, France farewell. News have I certainly,

“That Doll is sick on mallydie of France.

“The warres affordeth nought, home will I trug;

“Bawd will I turne, and use the slyte of hand.

“To England will I steal, and there I’ll steal;

“And patches will I get unto these skarres,

“And swear I gat them in the Gallia warres.”

JOHNSON.

135. The comick scenes of The History of Henry the Fourth and Fifth are now at an end, and all the comick personages are now dismissed. Falstaff and Mrs. Quickly are dead; Nym and Bardolph are hanged; Gadds-hill was lost immediately after the robbery; Poins and Peto have vanished since, one knows not how; and Pistol is now beaten into obscurity. I believe every reader regrets their departure. JOHNSON.

136. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met!] Peace, for which we are here met, be to this meeting.

Here, after the chorus, the fifth act seems naturally to begin.

JOHNSON.

162. Unto this bar——] To this barrier; to this place of congress.

JOHNSON.

176. Her vine,——

Unpruned dies:——] We must read, lyes; for neglect of pruning does not kill the vine, but causes ses

ses it to ramify immoderately, and grow wild; by which the requisite nourishment is withdrawn from its fruit.

WARBURTON.

This emendation is physically right, but poetically the vine may be well enough said to die which ceases to bear fruit.

JOHNSON.

178. Like prisoners——] This image of prisoners is oddly introduced. A hedge even pleach'd is more properly imprisoned than when it luxuriates in unpruned exuberance.

JOHNSON.

182. ——deracinate——] To deracinate is to force up by the roots. So, in Troilus and Cressida:

“——rend and deracinate

“The unity,” &c.

STEEVENS.

190. Defective in their natures,——] Nature had been changed by some editors into nurture; but, as Mr. Upton observes, unnecessarily. Sua deficiuntur natura. They were not defective in their crecive nature, for they grew to wildness; but they were defective in their proper and favourable nature, which was to bring forth food for man.

STEEVENS.

196. ——diffus'd attire,] Diffus'd is so much used by our author for wild, irregular, and strange, that in The Merry Wives of Windsor he applies it to a song supposed to be sung by fairies.

JOHNSON.

198. ——former favour,] Former appearance.

JOHNSON.

217. ——We will, suddenly,

Pass our accept, and peremptory answer.] i. e. we will pass our acceptance of what we approve, and we

we will pass a peremptory answer to the rest. Politeness might forbid his saying, we will pass a denial, but his own dignity required more time for deliberation. TOLLET.

235. Fair Katharine, and most fair !] Shakspeare might have taken the hint for this scene from the anonymous play of Henry V. so often quoted, where the king begins with greater bluntness, and with an exordium most truly English ;

“ How now, fair lady Katharine of France !

“ What news ?” STEEVENS.

261. — such a plain king,] I know not why Shakspeare now gives the king nearly such a character as he made him formerly ridicule in Percy. This military grossness and unskilfulness in all the softer arts does not suit very well with the gayeties of his youth, with the general knowledge ascribed to him at his accession, or with the contemptuous message sent him by the dauphin, who represents him as fitter for the ball-room than the field, and tells him that he is not to revel into dutchies, or win provinces with a nimble galliard. The truth is, that the poet's matter failed him in the fifth act, and he was glad to fill it up with whatever he could get ; and not even Shakspeare can write well without a proper subject. It is a vain endeavour for the most skilful hand to cultivate barrenness, or to paint upon vacuity. JOHNSON.

267. clap hands—] See Winter's Tale. REED.

290. — take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy—]

stancy——] i. e. A constancy in the ingot, that hath suffered no alloy, as all coined metal has.

WARBURTON.

I believe this explanation is more ingenious than true; to coin is to stamp and to counterfeit. He uses it in both senses; uncoined constancy signifies real and true constancy, unrefined and unadorned. JOHNSON.

307. Is it possible dat I should love de enemy of France?] So, in the anonymous play of the Famous Victory of Henry the Fifth:

“Kate. How should I love thee, which is my father’s enemy?” STEEVENS.

318. ——like a married wife about her husband’s neck,——] The folio reads, a new married wife, and the quartos 1600 and 1608——like a bride on her new-married husband. STEEVENS.

344. ——with scrambling,——] i. e. scrambling. See Dr. Percy’s note on the first scene of this play.

STEEVENS.

348. go to Constantinople——] Shakspeare has here committed an anachronism. The Turks were not possessed of Constantinople before the year 1143, when Henry V. had been dead thirty-one years.

THEOBALD.

364. poor and untempering effect——] The sense is, I understand that you love me, notwithstanding my face has no power to temper, i. e. soften you to my purpose:

“——nature made you

“To temper man——” Otway.

So, again in Titus Andronicus, which may, at least, be quoted as the work of an author contemporary with Shakspeare:

“And temper him with all the art I have.”

STEEVENS.

419. Your lips should sooner persuade Harry of England, than a general petition of monarchs.] So, in the old anonymous Henry V.

“——Tell thy father from me, that none in the world should sooner have persuaded me,” &c.

STEEVENS.

427. ——my condition is not smooth:] Condition is temper. So, in K. Henry IV. Part I. sc. iii.

“——my condition,

“Which has been smooth as oil,” &c.

STEEVENS.

453. This moral——] i. e. the application of this fable. The moral being the application of a fable, our author calls any application a moral. JOHNSON.

479. notre très cher filz—and thus in Latin; præclarissimus filius.——] What, is très cher, in French, Præclarissimus in Latin? We should read, precarissimus.
WARBURTON.

“This is exceeding true,” says Dr. Farmer, “but how came the blunder? It is a typographical one in Holinshed, which Shakspeare copied; but must indisputably have been corrected, had he been acquainted with the languages.” STEEVENS.

510. Prepare we, &c.] The quartos 1600 and 1608 conclude with the following speech:

K

“Hen.

“ Hen. Why then fair Katharine,
 “ Come, give me thy hand:
 “ Our marriage will we present solemnize,
 “ And end our hatred by a bond of love.
 “ Then will I swear to Kate, and Kate to me,
 “ And may our vows once made, unbroken be.”

STEEVENS.

516. Our bending author——] By bending, our author meant unequal to the weight of his subject, and bending beneath it; or he may mean, as in Hamlet:

“ Here stooping to your clemency.” STEEVENS.

518. Mangling by starts——] By touching only on select parts. JOHNSON.

THE END.

ANNOTATIONS

BY

SAM. JOHNSON & GEO. STEEVENS,

AND

THE VARIOUS COMMENTATORS,

UPON

KING HENRY VI.

PART I.

WRITTEN BY

WILL. SHAKSPERE.

—SIC ITUR AD ASTRA.

VIRG.

LONDON:

Printed for, and under the Direction of,

JOHN BELL, British-Library, STRAND,

Bookseller to His Royal Highness the PRINCE of WALES.

M DCC LXXXVII.

ANNOTATIONS

BY

SAM. JOHNSON & GEO. STEPHENS,

AND

THE VARIOUS COMMENTATORS,

OF

KING CHARLES II.

P. A. R. T. I.

WRITTEN BY

WILL. SHAKSPERE.

—SICUTUR ADASTRA.

VIZ.

L O N D O N :

Printed for, and under the Direction of,

JOHN BELL, Printing-Office, STRAND,

Bookseller to His Royal Highness the PRINCE OF WALES.

MDCCLXXVII.

A N N O T A T I O N S
U P O N
K I N G H E N R Y V I.

P A R T I.

A C T I.

Line 3. BRANDISH your crystal tresses—] Crystal is an epithet repeatedly bestowed on comets by our ancient writers. So, in a Sonnet, Lord Sterline, 1604:

“When as those crystal comets whiles appear.”

Spenser, in his Faery Queene, Book I. c. x. applies it to a lady’s face:

“Like sunny beams threw from her crystal face.”

Again in an ancient song entitled: The falling out of Lovers is the renewing of Love:

“You crystal planets shine all clear

“And light a lover’s way.”

“There is also a white comet with silver haire,” says Pliny, as translated by P. Holland, 1601.

STEEVENS.

5. That have consented——] If this expression mean no more than that the stars gave a bare consent, or agreed to let king Henry die, it does no great honour to its author. I believe to consent, in this instance, means to act in concert. Concentus, Lat. Thus Erato the muse applauding the song of Apollo, in Lylly’s Midas, 1592, cries out: “O sweet consent!” i. e. sweet union of sounds.

Again, in Spenser’s Faery Queene, B. IV. c. ii.

“Such musick his wise words with time consented.”

Again, in his translation of Virgil’s Culex:

“Chaunted their sundry notes with sweet concent.” and in many other places. Consented, or as it should be spelt, concented, means, have thrown themselves into a malignant configuration, to promote the death of Henry. Spenser, in more than one instance, spells this word as it appears in the text of Shakspeare; as does Ben Jonson, in his Ephithalamion on Mr. Weston. The following lines:

“——shall we curse the planets of mishap,

“That plotted thus,” &c.

seem to countenance my explanation; and Falstaff says of Shallow’s servants, that——“they flock together in consent, like so many wild geese.”

STEEVENS.

25. ——the subtle-witted French, &c] There was a notion prevalent a long time, that life mi ht be taken away by metrical charms. As superstition grew weaker, these charms were imagined only to have power on irrational animals. In our author's time it was supposed that the Irish could kill rats by a song.

JOHNSON.

So, in Reginald Scot's Discoveries of Witchcraft, 1584 : "The Irishmen addict themselves, &c. yea they will not sticke to affirme that they can rime either man or beast to death."

STEEVENS.

50. Our isle be made a marish of salt tears.] I have been informed, that what we call at present a stew, in which fish are preserved alive, was anciently called a nourish.

Nourice, however, Fr. a nurse, was anciently spelt many different ways, among which nourish was one :

"Of that chylde she was blyth,

"After noryshes she sent belive."

Syr Eglamour of Artois, bl. l. no date.

A nourish, therefore, in this passage of our author, signifies a nurse, as it apparently does in the 12th chapter of the first book of the Tragedies of John Bochus, by Lydgate ;

"——thenes whan it was in his floures

"Was called nourish of philosophers wise."

"——Jubæ tellus generat, leonum

"Arida nutrix." STEEVENS.

Spenser, in his Ruins of Time, uses nourice as an English word :

"Chaucer, the nourice of antiquity."

MALONE.

56. Than Julius Cæsar, or bright—] T. Hammer has stopped at Cæsar. It might, however, have been written,—or bright Berenice. JOHNSON.

60. Guienne, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans,] This verse might be completed by the insertion of Roan among the places lost, as Gloster in his next speech infers, that it had been mentioned with the rest.

STEEVENS.

88. To weep their intermissive miseries.] i. e. their miseries, which have had only a short intermission from Henry the Fifth's death to my coming amongst them. WARBURTON.

112. Having full scarce, &c.] So, in the Tempest:

“——Prospero, master of a full poor cell.”

STEEVENS.

131. If Sir John Fastolfe—] Mr. Pope has taken notice, “That Falstaff is here introduced again, who was dead in Henry V. The occasion whereof is, that this play was written before Henry IV. or Henry V.” But Sir John Fastolfe (for so he is called) was a lieutenant general, deputy regent to the duke of Bedford in Normandy, and a knight of the garter; and not the comick character afterwards introduced by our author. THEOBALD.

Mr. Theobald might have seen his notion contradicted in the very line he quotes from. Fastolfe, whether truly or not, is said by Hall and Holinshed to have been degraded for cowardice. Dr. Heylin, in his St. George for England, tells us, that “he was afterwards, upon good reason by him alledged in his defence, defence, restored to his honour.”—“ This Sir John Fastolfe,” continues he, “ was without doubt, a valiant and wise captain, notwithstanding the stage hath made merry with him.” FARMER.

In the 18th song of Drayton’s Polyolbion is the following character of this Sir John Fastolph:

“ Strong Fastolph with this man compare we justly may,

“ By Salsbury who oft being seriously imploy’d

“ In many a brave attempt the general foe annoy’d ;

“ With excellent successe in Main and Anjou fought,

“ And many a bulwarke there into our keeping brought ;

“ And chosen to go forth with Vadamont in warre,

“ Most resolutely tooke proud Renate duke of Barre.” STEEVENS.

For an account of this Sir John Fastolfe, see Anstis’s Treatise on the Order of the Garter ; Parkins’s Supplement to Blomfield’s History of Norfolk ; Tanner’s Bibliotheca Britannica. Capel’s notes, Vol. I. p. 228.

REED.
and Fenn’s Collection of the Paston Letters. HENLEY.

132. He being in the vaward (plac’d behind,] Some of the editors seem have considered this as a contradiction in terms, and have proposed to read—the rereward,—but without necessity. Some part of the van must have been behind the foremost line of it.

STEEVENS.

178. Mars his true moving, &c.] So Nash, in one of his prefaces before Gabriel Harvey's Hunt is up, 1596:—"You are as ignorant in the true movings of my muse, as the astronomers are in the true movings of Mars, which to this day they could never attain to."

STEEVENS.

205. ———as their hungry prey.] I believe it should be read:

As their hungred prey.

JOHNSON.

207. England all Olivers and Rowlands bred,] These were two of the most famous in the list of Charlemagne's twelve peers; and their exploits are render'd so ridiculously and equally extravagant by the old romancers, that from thence arose that saying amongst our plain and sensible ancestors, of giving one a Rowland for his Oliver, to signify the matching one incredible lie with another.

WARBURTON.

Rather, to oppose one hero to another, i. e. to give a person as good a one as he brings.

STEEVENS.

218. ———gimmals—] A gimmal is a piece of jointed work, where one pin moves within another, whence it is taken at large for an engine. It is now by the vulgar called a gimcrack.

JOHNSON.

In the inventory of the jewels, &c. belonging to Salisbury cathedral, taken in 1536, 28th of Henry VIII. is---"A faire chest with gimmals and key." Again, "Three other chests with gimmals of silver and gilt."

STEEVENS.

225. ———your cheer appall'd ;---] Cheer is countenance, appearance.

STEEVENS.

233. ——— nine Sibyls of old Rome;] There were no nine Sibyls of Rome; but he confounds things, and mistakes this for the nine books of Sibylline oracles, brought to one of the Tarquins. WARBURTON.

235. Believe my words,] It should be read :

————— believe her words. JOHNSON.

276. Deck'd with fine flower-de-luces, &c.] We should read, according to Holinshed, five flower-de-luces. “ ———in a secret place there among old iron, appointed she hir sword to be sought out and brought her, that with five floure-de-lices was graven on both sides,” &c. STEEVENS.

285. Impatiently I burn with thy desire;] The amorous constitution of the Dauphin has been mentioned in the preceding play :

“ Doing is activity, and he will still be doing.”

COLLINS.

308. Expect saint Martin's summer,] That is, expect prosperity after misfortune, like fair weather at Martlemas, after winter has begun. JOHNSON.

310. Glory is like a circle in the water,

Which never ceases to enlarge itself,

'Till, by broad spreading, it disperse to nought.]

So, in NOSCE TEIPSUM, a poem by Sir John Davies, 1599 :

“ As when a stone is into water cast,

“ One circle doth another circle make,

“ Till the last circle reach the bank at last.”

See also Statius, lib. 13, v. 24.

MALONE.

315. ——— like that proud insulting ship,

Which Cæsar and his fortune bore at once.] This alludes to a passage in Plutarch's Life of Julius Cæsar, thus translated by Sir T. North. "Cæsar hearing that, straight discovered himself unto the maister of the pinnase, who at the first was amazed when he saw him: but Cæsar, &c. said unto him, Good fellow, be of good cheere, &c. and fear not, for thou hast Cæsar his fortune with thee." STEEVENS.

317. Dauph. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?] Mahomet had a dove, "which he used to feed with wheat out of his ear; which dove, when it was hungry, lighted on Mahomet's shoulder, and thrust his bill in to find its breakfast; Mahomet persuading the rude and simple Arabians, that it was the Holy Ghost that gave him advice." See Sir Walter Raleigh's History of the Word, Book I. Part I. ch. vi. Life of Mahomet, by Dr. Prideaux. GREY.

320. Nor yet saint Philip's daughters,—] Meaning the four daughters of Philip mentioned in the Acts. HANMER.

329. ——— there is conveyance.—] Conveyance means theft. HANMER.

340. Break up the gates,—] I suppose to break up the gate, is to force up the portcullis, or, by the application of petards, to blow up the gates themselves. STEEVENS.

To break up, in Shakspeare's age, was the same as to break open. Thus in our translation of the Bible. "They

“ They have broken up, and have passed through the gate.” Micah, c. 2. v. 13. So, again in St. Matthew, “ He would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up.” c. 24. v. 43.

WHALLEY.

356. — tawny coats.] It appears from the following passage in a comedy called, A Maidenhead well Lost, 1634, that a tawny coat was the dress of a sumpner, i. e. an apparitor, an officer whose business it was to summon offenders to an ecclesiastical court:

“ Tho’ I was never a tawny-coat, I have play’d the sommoner’s part.”

These are the natural attendants therefore on the bishop of Winchester. So, in Stowe’s Chronicle, p. 822: “ — and by the way the bishop of London met him, attended on by a goodly company of gentlemen in tawny-coats,” &c.

Tawny was likewise a colour worn for mourning, as well as black; and was therefore the proper and sober habit of any person employed in an ecclesiastical court.

“ A crowne of baies shall that man weare

“ That triumphes over me;

“ For blacke and tawnie will I weare,

“ Which mourning colours be.”

The Complaint of a Lover wearing blaeke and tawnie; by E. O. Paradise of Dainty Devises, 1596.

STEEVENS.

357. Piel’d priest, —] Alluding to his shaven crown. POPE.

B

In

In Skinner (to whose dictionary I was directed by Mr. Edwards) I find that it means more: Pill'd or peel'd garlick, cui pellis, vel pili omnes ex morbo aliquo, præsertim e lue venerea, defluerunt.

In Ben Jonson's Bartholemew Fair the following instance occurs:

“ I'll see them p——'d first, and pil'd and double pil'd.” STEEVENS.

In Weever's Funeral Monuments, p. 134. Robert Baldocke, Bishop of London, is called a peel'd priest, pilide clerk, seemingly in allusion to his shaven crown alone. So, bald-head was a term of scorn and mockery.

TOLLET.

362. Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin:—] The publick stews were formerly under the direction of the bishop of Winchester. POPE.

There is now extant an old manuscript (formerly the office-book of the court-leet held under the jurisdiction of the bishop of Winchester in Southwark), in which are mentioned the several fees arising from the brothel-houses allowed to be kept in the bishop's manor, with the customs and regulations of them. One of the articles is,

“ De his, qui custodiunt mulieres habentes nefandam infirmitatem.”

“ Item, That no stewholder keep any woman within his house, that hath any sickness of brenning, but that she be put out upon pain of making a fyne unto the lord of C shillings.” UPTON.

363. I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat,] This

This means, I believe, I'll tumble thee into thy great hat, and shake thee, as bran and meal are shaken in a sieve.

So, Sir W. Davenant, in the Cruel Brother, 1630:

“ I'll sift and winnow him in an old hat.”

To canvass was anciently used for to sift. So, in Hanc Beer-pot's Invisible Comedy, 1618:

“ ——— We'll canvass him. ——— ”

“ ——— I am too big ——— ”

Again in the Epistle Dedicatory to Have with you to Saffron Walden, or Gabriel Hervey's Hunt is up, &c. 1596:

——“ canvaze him and his angel brother Gabriel in ten sheets of paper,” &c. STEEVENS.

May not the Duke mean, I will interrogate thee, and sift thy conduct, in defiance of the hat thou wear-est, and the support which the Pope may vouchsafe thee? HENLEY.

366. This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain,] N. B. About four miles from Damascus is a high hill, reported to be the same on which Cain slew his brother Abel. Maundrel's Travels, p. 131. POPE.

“ And in that place where Damasc was founded Kaym sloughe Abel his brother.” Mandeville's Travels. REED.

380. Winchester goose!——] A strumpet, or the consequences of her love, was a Winchester goose.

JOHNSON.

410. Mayor. I'll call for clubs, if yon will not away:——] This was an outcry for assistance, on any riot or quarrel in the streets. It hath been explained before. WHALLEY.

416. ———that nobles should such stomachs bear!

I myself fight not once in forty year.] The Mayor speaks first as a magistrate, and afterwards as a citizen.

JOHNSON.

424. The prince's 'spials] Espials are spies. So, in Chaucer's Freres Tale:

“For subtilly he had his espiaille.” STEEVENS.

440. Talbot,] Though the three parts of K. Henry VI. are deservedly numbered among the feeblest performances of Shakspeare, this first of them appears to have been received with the greatest applause. So, in Pierce Penniless Supplication to the Devil, by Nash, 1595: “How would it have joyed brave Talbot (the terror of the French) to thinke that after he had line two hundred years in his tombe, he should triumph againe on the stage, and have his bones new embalmed with the teares of ten thousand spectators at least (at several times), who in the tragedian that represents his person, imagine they behold him fresh bleeding.”

STEEVENS.

450. ———so pill'd esteem'd.] So pill'd, means so pillag'd, so stripp'd of honours.

STEEVENS.

500. One eye thou hast, &c.] A similar thought occurs in King Lear:

“——my lord, you have one eye left,

“To see some mischief on him.”

STEEVENS.

524. Pucelle or Puzzel,——] It should be remembered, that in Shakspeare's time the word dauphin was always written dolphin.

STEEVENS.

Pussel means a dirty wench or a drab, from puzza, i. e.

malus

malus fætor, says Minshew. In a translation from Stephens's Apology for Herodotus, in 1607, p. 98, we read,—“Some filthy queens, especially our puzzles of Paris, use this other theft.” TOLLET.

So, Stubbs, in his Anatomie of Abuses, 1595.—“No nor yet any droye nor puzzel in the country but will carry a nosegay in her hand.”

Again, in Ben Jonson's Commendatory Verses, prefix'd to the works of Beaumont and Fletcher:

“Lady or Pusill then wears mask or fan.”

As for the conceit, miserable as it is, it may be countenanced by that of James I. who looking at the statue of Sir Tho. Bodley in the library at Oxford, “—Pii Thomæ Godly nomine insignivit, eoque potius nomine quam Bodly, deinceps merito nominandum esse censuit.” See Rex Platonicus, &c. edit. quint. Oxon. 1635, p. 187. STEEVENS.

There are frequent references to this etymology in this play:

“I scar'd the dauphin and his trull.”

Again:

“Scoff on, vile fiend, and shameless courtezan!”

MALONE.

534. Blood will I draw on thee,—] The superstition of those times taught, that he that could draw the witch's blood, was free from her power. JOHNSON.

573. —like Adonis' gardens,] It may not be impertinent to take notice of a dispute upon this very important point of the gardens of Adonis. Milton had said:

“ Spot more delicious than those gardens feign’d,

“ Or of reviv’d Adonis, or——” which Dr. Bentley pronounces spurious; for that the Κῆποι Ἀδωνιδος, the gardens of Adonis, so frequently mentioned by Greek writers, Plato, Plutarch, &c. were nothing but portable earthen pots, with some lettuce or fennel growing in them. On his yearly festival every woman carried one of them for Adonis’s worship; because Venus had once laid him in a lettuce bed. The next day they were thrown away, &c. To this Dr. Pearce replies, That this account of the gardens of Adonis is right, and yet Milton may be defended for what he says of them: for why (says he) did the Grecians on Adonis’ festival carry these small gardens about in honour of him? It was, because they had a tradition, that, when he was alive, he delighted in gardens, and had a magnificent one: for proof of this we have Pliny’s words, xix. 4.” “Antiquitas nihil prius mirata est quàm Hesperidum hortos, ac regum Adonidis & Alcinoi.”

WARBURTON.

589. Than Rhodope’s,——] Rhodope was a famous strumpet, who acquired great riches by her trade. The least, but most finished of the Egyptian pyramids (says Pliny, in the 36th book of his Natural History) was built by her. She is said afterwards to have married Psammetichus, king of Egypt. Dr. Johnson thinks that the Dauphin means to call Joan of Arc a strumpet, all the while he is making this loud praise of her.

Rhodope is mentioned in the play of The Costly Whore, 1633:

“ ——a

“ ———a base Rhodope,

“ Whose body is as common as the sea

“ In the receipt of every lustful spring.”

I would read :

Than Rhodope's of Memphis ever was.

STEEVENS.

592. ———coffer of Darius] When Alexander the Great took the city of Gaza, the metropolis of Syria, amidst the other spoils and wealth of Darius treasured up there, he found an exceeding rich and beautiful little chest or casket, and asked those about him what they thought fittest to be laid up in it. When they had severally delivered their opinions, he told them, he esteemed nothing so worthy to be preserved in it as Homer's Iliad. Vide Plutarchum in Vita Alexandri Magni.

THEOBALD.

ACT. II.

Line 41. ———UNREADY so?] Unready was the current word in those times for undress'd. JOHNSON.

So, in The two Maids of More-clacke, 1609 :

“ Enter James unready in his night-cap, garterless,” &c.

Again, in A Match at Midnight, 1633, is this stage direction :

“ He

“ He makes himself unready.”

“ Why what do you mean? you will not be so uncivil as to unbrace you here?”

Again, in Monsieur D'olive, 1606:

“ You are not going to bed, I see you are not yet unready,”

Again, in Heywood's Golden Age, 1611: —

“ Here Jupiter puts out the lights, and makes himself unready.” STEEVENS.

81. Enter a soldier, crying, a Talbot! a Talbot!] And afterwards:

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword. Here, a popular tradition, exclusive of any chronicle-evidence, was in Shakspeare's mind. Edward Kerke, the old commentator on Spenser's Pastorals, first published in 1579, observes in his notes on June, that lord Talbot's “ noblenesse bred such a terrour in the hearts of the French, that oftentimes greate armies were defaited and put to flight, at the only hearing of his name: insomuch that the French women, to affray their children, would tell them that the TALBOT cometh.” See also the end of Sc. iii. Act. ii. WARTON.

The same is said in Drayton's Miseries of Queen Margaret, of Lord Warwick:

“ And still so fearful was great Warwick's name,

“ That being once cry'd on, put them oft to flight,

“ On the king's army till at length they light.”

112. — his trull;] I believe trull did not anciently bear so harsh an interpretation as at present

in

In the old black letter interlude of the Disobedient child (no date) by Tho. Ingeland, is the following stanza of a song sung by a young man in the presence of the lady to whom he was instantly to be married :

“ This mynion here, this myncing trull,

“ Doth please me more a thousande folde,

“ Than all the earthe that is so full

“ Of precious stones, silver, and golde.” &c.

“ How like ye this songe, my owne swete Rose ?

“ Is it well made for our purpose ?

Young Woman.

“ I never heard in all my lyfe a better,

“ More pleasaunte, more meete for the matter.”

STEEVENS.

Mr. Reed, on the authority of the author of The Remarks says, that in Shakspeare's time, and long before, trull signified a strumpet, a harlot; and adds : “ In the ancient Morality of the Four Elements, a fellow says :

“ For to satisfy your wanton lust,

“ I shall appoint you a trull of trust,

“ Nor a fairer in this town.”

Again, in the old May Game of Robin Hode :

“ She is a trull of trust, to serve a fryer at his lust.”

187. ———captivate.] So, in Soliman and Perseda :

“ If not destroy'd and bound, and captivate,

“ If captivate, then forc'd from holy faith.”

STEEVENS.

190. —so fond] i. e. so foolish, STEEVENS.

203. This is a riddling merchant, &c.] So, in Romeo and Juliet:

“What saucy merchant was this.”

See a note on this passage, act II. sc. iv. STEEVENS.

234. All the editions read :

Or, else, was wrangling Somerset i' th' error ?] There is apparently a want of opposition between the two questions. I once read,

Or else was wrangling Somerset i' th' right ?

JOHNSON.

Sir T. Hanmer would read ;

And was not————— STEEVENS.

258. From off this briar pluck a white rose with me.]

This is given as the original of the two badges of the houses of York and Lancaster, whether truly or not, is no great matter. But the proverbial expression of saying a thing under the rose, I am persuaded came from thence. When the nation had ranged itself into two great factions, under the white and red rose, and were perpetually plotting and counterplotting against one another, then, when a matter of faction was communicated by either party to his friend in the same quarrel, it was natural for him to add, that he said it under the rose : meaning that, as it concerned the faction, it was religiously to be kept secret.

WARBURTON.

This is ingenious ! What pity, that it is not learned too ?——The rose, (as the fables say) was the symbol bol of silence, and consecrated by Cupid to Harpocrates, to conceal the lewd pranks of his mother. So common a book as Lloyd's Dictionary might have instructed Dr. Warburton in this. "Huic Harpocrati Cupido Veneris filius parentis suæ rosam dedit in munus, ut scilicet si quid licentius dictum, vel actum sit in convivio, sciant tacenda esse omnia. Atque idcirco veteres ad finem convivii sub rosa, (Anglicè under the rose,) transacta esse omnia ante digressum contestabantur; cujus formae vis eadem esset, atque ista, Μισῶ μνάριονα συμπόταν. Probant hanc rem versus qui reperiuntur in marmore:

"Est rosa flos Veneris, cujus quo furta laterent

"Harpocrati matris dona dicavit amor.

"Inde rosam mensis hospes suspendit amicis,

"Convivæ ut sub ea dicta tacenda sciant."

UPTON.

262. I love no colours ;—] Colours is here used ambiguously for tints and deceits. JOHNSON.

271. —well objected ;] Properly thrown in our way, justly proposed. JOHNSON.

So, in Chapman's Version of the 21st Book of Homer's Odyssey :

"Excites Penelope t' object the prize

"(The bow and bright steeles) to the woer's strength." STEEVENS.

314. Spring crestless yeomen—] i. e. those who have no right to arms. WARBURTON.

315. He bears him on the place's privilege,] The Temple, being a religious house, was an assylum, a place place of exemption, from violence, revenge, and blood-shed.

JOHNSON.

322. Corrupted, and exempted—] Exempt, for excluded.

WARBURTON.

331. —for this apprehension:] Apprehension, i. e. opinion.

WARBURTON.

336. *—this pale and angry rose,
As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,]*

So, in Romeo and Juliet:

“Either my eye-sight fails, or thou look’st pale.—

“And, trust me, love, in mine eye so do you:

“Dry sorrow drinks our blood.” STEEVENS.

A badge is called a cognisance à cognoscendo, because by it such persons as do wear it upon their sleeves, their shoulders, or in their hats, are manifestly known whose servants they are. In heraldry the cognisance is seated upon the most eminent part of the helmet; and by a designed blunder in Ben Jonson’s works 1765, vol. I. p. 160, and vol. II. p. 356, it is called a cullisen, which Mr. Whalley’s Dictionaries, or the heralds he consulted, could not explain. TOLLET.

364. Enter Mortimer,—] In the third year of Henry VI. (1425), and during the time that Peter Duke of Coimbra was entertained in London, “Ed“monde Mortymer,” says Hall, “the last erle of “March of that name (which long tyme had bene re“strayned from his liberty, and finally waxed lame)
“disceased wythout yssue, whose inheritance dis-“cended to Lord Richard Plantagenet,” &c.

REMARKS.

365. Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.——] I know not whether Milton did not take from this hint the lines with which he opens his tragedy. JOHNSON.

Rather from the beginning of the last scene of the third act of the Phænissæ of Euripides:

Tiresias. Ἦγε πάροιθε δύγαλιν, ὥς τυφλῷ ποδὶ
Ὀφθαλμὸς εἴ σὺ, ναυβάταισιν ἄστρον ὥς
Δευρ', εἰς τὸ λευρὸν πέδον ἵχνος τιθεῖς ἐμόν, &c.

STEEVENS.

368. ——pursuivants of death,] Pursuivants. The heralds that, forerunning death, proclaim its approach.

JOHNSON.

370. Edmund Mortimer.] This Edmund Mortimer, when King Richard II. set out upon his fatal Irish expedition, was declared by that prince heir apparent to the crown; for which reason King Henry IV. and V. took care to keep him in prison during their whole reigns.

THEOBALD.

372. ——as drawing to their exigent:] Exigent, end.

JOHNSON.

So, in Doctor Dodypoll, a comedy, 1600:

“Hath driven her to some desperate exigent.”

STEEVENS.

374. And pithless arms,——] Pith was used for marrow, and figuratively, for strength.

JOHNSON.

392. Just death, kind umpire of mens' miseries,] i. e. he that terminates or concludes misery. The expression is harsh and forced.

JOHNSON.

407. ——I'll tell thee my disease.] Disease seems to be here uneasiness or discontent.

JOHNSON.

It is so used by other ancient writers, and by Shakspeare elsewhere. Thus likewise in Spenser's Faerie Queene, book iii. c. 5.

“ But labour'd long in that deep ford with vain disease.”

That to disease is to disturb, may be known from the following passages in Chapman's version of the Iliad and Odyssy:

“ But brother, hye thee to the ships, and Idomen disease.”

i. e. wake him. Book vi. edit. 1598.

Again, Odyss. b. vi.

“ ———with which he declin'd

“ The eyes of any waker when he pleas'd,

“ And any sleeper when he wish'd diseased.”

Again, in the ancient metrical history of the Battle of Flodden:

“ He thought the Scots might him disease

“ With constituted captains meet.” STEEVENS.

427. ———his nephew Richard;——] Thus the old copy. Modern editors read—his cousin—but without necessity. Nephew has sometimes the power of the Latin nepos, and is used with great laxity among our ancient English writers. Thus in Othello, Iago tells Brabantio——he shall “ have his nephews (i. e. the children of his own daughter) neigh to him.”

STEEVENS.

442. ———in his haughty great attempt,] Haughty is h.

JOHNSON.

his. . . Thou art my heir; the rest, I wish thee gather:]

459.

The

The sense is, I acknowledge thee to be my heir; the consequences which may be collected from thence, I recommend it to thee to draw. REVISAL.

485. Here dies the dusky torch——] The image is of a torch just extinguished, and yet smoaking. But we should read lies instead of dies. For when a dead man is represented by an extinguished torch, we must say the torch lies: when an extinguished torch is compared to a dead man, we must say the torch dies. The reason is plain, because integrity of metaphor requires that the terms proper to the thing illustrating, not the thing illustrated, be employed. WARBURTON.

486. Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort:——] We are to understand the speaker as reflecting on the ill fortune of Mortimer, in being always made a tool of by the Percies of the North in their rebellious intrigues; rather than in asserting his claim to the crown, in support of his own princely ambition.

WARBURTON.

492. In the former editions,

Or make my will th' advantage of my good] So all the printed copies; but with very little regard to the poet's meaning. I read,

Or make my ill th' advantage of my good.—

Thus we recover the antithesis of the expression.

THEOBALD.

Æt III.

Line 54. — ROAM thither then.] Roam to Rome. To roam is supposed to be derived from the cant of vagabonds, who often pretended a pilgrimage to Rome.

JOHNSON.

The jingle between roam and Rome is common to other writers. So, in Nash's Lenten Stuff, &c. 1599:

“ ———three hundred thousand people roamed to Rome for purgatorie pills,” &c.

STEEVENS.

[55. Som. My lord it were your duty to forbear.] This line, in the old copy, is joined to the former hemistich spoken by Warwick. The modern editors have very properly given it to Somerset, for whom it seems to have been meant.

Ay, see, the bishop be not over-borne, was erroneously given in the next speech to Somerset, instead of Warwick, to whom it has been since restored.

STEEVENS.

97. ———unaccustom'd fight aside.] Uuaccustom'd is unseemly, indecent.

JOHNSON.

103. ———an inkhorn mate,] A bookman.

JOHNSON.

136. ———hath a kindly gird.——] A kindly gird is a gentle or friendly reproof. Falstaff observes, that “ ———men of all sorts take a pride to gird at him.” and in the Taming of the Shrew, Babtista says, “ ———Tranio hits you now:” to which Lucentio answers,

“ I thank

“ I thank thee for that gird, good Tranio.”

STEEVENS.

176. ———reguerdon———] Recompence, return.

JOHNSON.

200. So will this base and envious discord breed.] i. e. so will the malignity of this discord propagate itself, and advance.

JOHNSON.

217. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city,] Falstaff has the same quibble, shewing his bottle of sack :

“ Here’s that will sack a city.”

STEEVENS.

220. Qui va là ?] The old eopy has—Che là ; evidently a corruption of—Qui est là ?

MALONE.

227. ———Here enter’d Pucelle, and her practisants :] Practice, in the language of that time, was treachery, and perhaps in the softer sense stratagem. Practisants are therefore confederates in stratagems.

JOHNSON.

232. No way to that,———] i. e. no way equal to that, no way so fit as that.

JOHNSON.

247. That hardly we escap’d the pride of France.] Pride signifies the haughty power. The same speaker says afterwards, act iv. scene vi.

“ And from the pride of Gallia rescu’d thee.

WARBURTON.

248. ———Alençon, on the walls.———] Alençon, Sir Thomas Hanmer has replaced here, instead of Reignier, because Alençon, not Reignier, appears in the ensuing scene.

JOHNSON.

301. ———once I read,

That stout Pendragon, in his litter, &c.] This hero was Uther Pendragon, brother to Aurelius, and father to King Arthur.

Shakspeare has imputed to Pendragon an exploit of Aurelius, who, says Holinshed, “even sicke of a flixe as he was, caused himselfe to be carried forth in a litter: with whose presence his people were so encouraged, that encountering with the Saxons they wan the victorie.” Hist. of Scotland, p. 99.

Harding, however, in his Chronicle (as I learn from Dr. Grey), gives the following account of Uther Pendragon:

“For which the king ordain’d a horse-litter
 “To bear him so then unto Verolame,
 “Where Ocea lay, and Oysa also in fear,
 “That saint Albone’s now hight of noble fame, “Bet downe the walles; but to him forth they came,
 “Where in battayle Ocea and Oysa were slayn.
 “The felde he had, and thereof was full fayne.”

STEEVENS.

318. *Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven shall please;
 For I have seen——*] So. in St. Luke, 2, 29.

“Lord now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace,
 “for mine eyes have seen thy salvation.” STEEVENS.

332. What, all a-mort?——] i. e. depressed with melancholy. * * *

369. But be extirped from our provinces.] To extirp is to root out. So, in Lord Sterline’s Darius, 1603:

“The world shall gather to extirp our name.”

STEEVENS.

370. —expuls'd from Fance,] i. e. expelled. So, in Ben Jonson's Sejanus:

“The expuls'd Apicata finds them there.”

Again, in Drayton's Muses Elizium:

“And if you expulse them there,

“They'll hang upon your braided hair.”

STEEVENS.

392. As looks the mother on her lowly babe,] It is plain Shakspeare wrote, —lovely babe, it answering to fertile France above, which this domestick image is brought to illustrate. WARBURTON.

The alteration is easy and probable; but perhaps the poet, by lowly babe, meant the babe lying low in death. Lowly answers as well to towns defaced and wasting ruin, as lovely to fertile. JOHNSON.

423. —these haughty words of hers

Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot,] How these lines came hither I know not; there was nothing in the speech of Joan haughty or violent, it was all soft intreaty and mild expostulation. JOHNSON.

429. Done like a Frenchman; turn, and turn again!] This seems to be an offering of the poet to his royal mistress's resentment, for Henry the Fourth's last great turn in religion, in the year 1593. WARBURTON.

The inconstancy of the French was always the subject of satire. I have read a dissertation written to prove, that the index of the wind upon our steeples was made in form of a cock, to ridicule the French for their frequent changes. JOHNSON.

459. Or been reguerdon'd —] i. e. rewarded. The word word was obsolete even in the time of Shakspeare. Chaucer uses it in the Boke of Boethius. STEEVENS.

465. ——— these colours that I wear] This was the badge of a rose, and not an officer's scarf. So, in Love's Labour's Lost: act iii. scene the last,

“ And wear his colours like a tumbler's hoop.”

TOLLET.

475. That, who so draws a sword, 'tis present death ;] Shakspeare wrote, ————— draws a sword i' th' presence 't's death ;

i. e. in the court, or in the presence chamber.

WARBURTON.

This reading cannot be right, because, as Mr. Edwards observed, it cannot be pronounced. It is, however, a good comment, as it shews the author's meaning. JOHNSON.

I believe the line should be written as in the folio :

“ That, who so draws a sword————”

i. e. (as Dr. Warburton has observed) with a menace in the court, or in the presence chamber Johnson, in his collection of Ecclesiastical Laws, has preserved the following, which was made by Ina, king of the West Saxons, 623. “ If any one fights in the king's house, let him forfeit all his estate, and let the king deem whether he shall live or not.” I am told that there are many other ancient canons to the same purpose. Grey. STEEVENS.

Sir William Blackstone observes that, “ by the ancient law before the Conquest, fighting in the king's palace, or before the king's judges, was punished with “ death.”

“ death. So too in the old Gothic constitution, there “ were many places privileged by law, quibus major “ reverentia et securitas debetur, ut templa et judicia, quæ
 “ sancta habebantur,—arces et aula regis,—Denique locus
 “ quilibet presente aut adventante rege. And at present
 “ with us, by the Stat. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 12. mali“ cious striking in the king’s palace, wherein his royal “ person resides, whereby blood is drawn, is punish“ able by perpetual imprisonment and fine, at the “ king’s pleasure; and also with loss of the offender’s “ right hand, the solemn execution of which sentence “ is prescribed in the statute at length.” Commentaries, vol. iv. p. 124.

ACT IV.

Line 6. — SUCH as shall pretend] To pretend is to design, to intend. JOHNSON.

14. I vow’d base knight, when I did meet thee next,
To tear the garter from thy craven’s leg,] The last line should run thus,

From thy craven leg: thy mean, dastardly leg.

WHALLEY.

19. — at the battle of Poictiers—] The battle of Poictiers was fought in the year 1357, the 31st of king Edward III. and the scene now lies in the 7th year of the reign of king Henry VI. viz. 1428. This blunder

blunder may be justly imputed to the players or transcribers; nor can we very well justify ourselves for permitting it to continue so long, as it was too glaring to have escaped an attentive reader. The action, of which Shakspeare is now speaking, happened (according to Holinshed) “neere unto a village in Beausse called Pataie,” which we should read instead of Poictiers. “From this battell departed without anie stroke stricken, Sir John Fastolfe, the same yeere by his valiantnesse elected into the order of the garter. But for doubt of misdealing at this brunt, the Duke of Bedford tooke from him the image of St. George and his garter,” &c. Holinshed, Vol. II. p. 601.

STEEVENS.

35. ———haughty courage,] Haughty is here in its original sense for high. JOHNSON.

54. Pretend some alteration in good will?] Thus the old copy. To pretend seems to be here used in its Latin sense, i. e. to hold out, to stretch forward. Modern editors read portend. STEEVENS.

94. ———did repugn the truth,] To repugn is to resist. The word is used by Chaucer. STEEVENS.

180. In the former editions,
And if I wish he did——] By the pointing re-form'd, and a single letter expung'd, I have restor'd the text to its purity. And, if I wis, he did—Warwick had said, the king meant no harm in wearing Somerset's rose: York testily replies,

“Nay, if I know any thing, he did think harm.”

THEOBALD.

I read,

I read, I wist. The pret. of the old obsolete verb I wis, which is used by Shakspeare in The Merchant of Venice:

“There be fools alive, I wis,

“Silver’d o’er, and so was this.” STEEVENS.

York says, he is not pleased that the King should prefer the red rose, the badge of Somerset, his enemy; Warwick desires him not to be offended at it, as he dares say the King meant no harm. To which York, yet unsatisfied, hastily adds, in a menancing tone,—If I thought he did;—but he instantly checks his threat with—let it rest. It is an example of a rhetorical figure, which, our author has elsewhere used. Thus in Cariolanus:

“An ’twere to give again—But ’tis no matter.”

So also Virgil:

“Quo se go—sed motos præstat componere fluctus.”

The author of the Revisal understood this passage in the same manner. REMARKS.

199. Be humbled to us.] The first folio reads,

Be humble to us.

MALONE.

222. To rive their dangerous artillery] Rive their artillery seems to mean charge their artillery so much as to endanger their bursting. So, in Troilus and Cressida, Ajax bids the trumpeter blow so loud, as to crack his lungs and split his brazen pipe. TOLLET.

227. —due thee withal;] To due is to endue, to deck, grace. JOHNSON.

The old copy reads;—dew thee withal; and perhaps rightly. The dew of praise is an expression I have met with with in other poets: Shakspeare uses the same verb in Macbeth:

“To dew the sovereign flow’r, and drown the weeds.”

Again, in the second part of K. Henry VI.

“——give me thy hand,

“That I may dew it with my mournful tears.”

STEEVENS.

235. He fables not,——] This expression Milton has borrowed in his Masque at Ludlow Castle:

“She fables not, I feel that I do fear.”

It occurs again in the Pinner of Wakefield, 1599:

“——good father fable not with him.”

STEEVENS.

241. ——be then in blood:] Be in high spirits, be of true mettle.

JOHNSON.

242. Not rascal-like,——] A rascal deer is the term of chase for lean poor deer.

JOHNSON.

244. ——with heads of steel,] Continuing the image of the deer, he supposes the lances to be their horns.

JOHNSON.

247. ——dear deer of us,——] The same quibble occurs in K. Henry IV. part i.

“Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day,

“Though many a *deer*er.”

STEEVENS.

262. And am I lowted——] To lout, in Chaucer, signifies to submit. To submit is to let down. So, Dryden:

“Sometimes the hill submits itself a while

“In small descents,” &c.

STEEVENS.

A lowt

A lowt is a country fellow, a clown. He means that Somerset treats him like a hind. REMARKS.

296. ———the vulture———] Alluding to the tale of Prometheus. JOHNSON.

316. ring'd about———] Environed, encircled. JOHNSON.

321. ———in advantage ling'ring,] Protracting his resistance by the advantage of a strong post. JOHNSON.

323. ———worthless emulation.] In this line emulation signifies merely rivalry, not struggle for superior excellence. JOHNSON.

355. ———a feast of death,] To a field where death will be feasted with slaughter. JOHNSON.

365. ———noble Talbot stood.] For what reason this scene is written in rhyme I cannot guess. If Shakspeare had not in other plays mingled his rhymes and blank verses in the same manner, I should have suspected that this dialogue had been a part of some other poem which was never finished, and that being loath to throw his labour away, he inserted it here.

JOHNSON.

370. ———your regard———] Your care of your own safety. JOHNSON.

457. And like me to the peasant boys of France;] To like one to the peasants is, to compare, to level by comparison; the line is therefore intelligible enough by itself, but in this sense it wants connection. Sir T. Hanmer reads, And leave me, which makes a clear sense and just consequence. But as change is not to be allowed without necessity, I have suffered like to stand, because I suppose the author meant the same as make like, or reduce to a level with. JOHNSON.

463. Triumphant death smear'd with captivity!] That is, death stained and dishonoured with captivity. JOHNSON.

470. Tendering my ruin,———] Watching me with tenderness in my fall. JOHNSON.

I would rather read,—Tending my ruin, &c.

TYRWHITT.

I adhere to the old reading. So, in Hamlet, Polonius says to Ophelia :

“———Tender yourself more dearly.”

STEEVENS.

Again, in K. Henry VI. p. ii.

“ I tender so the safety of my liege.” MALONE.

478. Thou antic death,———] The fool, or antic of the play, made sport by mocking the graver personages. JOHNSON.

481. ——winged through the lither sky,] Lither is flexible or yielding. In much the same sense Milton says :

“ ——He with broad sails

“ Winnow'd the buxom air.”

That is, the obsequious air. JOHNSON.

Lither is the comparative of the adjective lithe.

So, in Lyly's Endymion, 1591 :

“ ——to breed numbness or litherness,”

Litherness is limberness or yielding weakness.

Again, in Look about You, 1600 :

“ I’ll bring his lither legs in better frame.”

Milton might have borrowed the expression from Spenser, or Gower, who uses it in the Prologue to his Confessio Amantis :

“ That unto him whiche the head is,

“ The membres buxom shall bowe.”

In the old service of matrimony the wife was enjoined to be buxom both at bed and board. Buxom therefore anciently signified obedient or yielding. Stubbs, in his Anatomie of Abuses, 1595, uses the word in the same sense :

“ —are so buxome to their shameless desires,”

&c.

STEEVENS.

ACT V.

Line 3. — WHELP of Talbot’s, raging brood,]
Thus the modern editions. I have restored the old reading. Raging-wood signifies raging mad.

STEEVENS.

4. — in Frenchmen’s blood!] The return of rhyme where young Talbot is again mentioned, and in no other place, strengthens the suspicion that these verses were originally part of some other work, and were copied here only to save the trouble of composing new.

JOHNSON.

9. ———of a giglot wench:] Giglot is a wanton, or a strumpet. JOHNSON.

The word is used by Gascoigne and other authors, though now quite obsolete.

So, in the play of Orlando Furioso, 1599:

“ Whose choice is like that Greekish giglot's love,

“ That left her lord, prince Menelaus.”

STEEVENS.

10. ———in the bowels of the French,] So, in the first part of Jeronimo, 1605:

“ Meet, Don Andrea! yes, in the battle's bowels.”

STEEVENS.

19. ———Conduct me to the Dauphin's tent; to know.

Who hath obtain'd———] Lucy's message implied that he knew who had obtained the victory: therefore Sir T. Hanmer reads:

Herald, conduct me to the Dauphin's tent. JOHNSON.

41. The Turk, &c.] Alluding probably to the ostentatious letter of Sultan Solymán the Magnificent, to the emperor Ferdinand, 1592; in which all the Grand Signior's titles are enumerated. See Knolles's Hist. of the Turks, 5th edit. p. 789. GREY.

78. ———immanity———] i. e. barbarity, savageness. STEEVENS.

93. What! is my lord of Winchester install'd,

And call'd unto a cardinal's degree!] This, (as Mr. Edwards has observed in his MS. notes) argues a great forgetfulness in the poet. In the first act Gloster says:

I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat ;
and it is strange that the duke of Exeter should not know of his advancement. STEEVENS.

124. That, nor in birth,—] I would read, for birth.
That is, thou shalt not rule me, though thy birth is legitimate, and thy authority supreme. JOHNSON.

The old copy reads, neither. STEEVENS.

150. —ye charming spells and periapts ;] Charms sow'd up. Ezek. xiii. 18. Woe to them that sow pillows to all arm-holes, to hunt souls. POPE.

Periapts were worn about the neck as preservatives from disease or danger. Of these, the first chapter of St. John's Gospel was deemed the most efficacious.

Whoever is desirous to know more about them, may consult Reginald Scott's Discovery of Witchcraft, 1584, p. 230, &c. STEEVENS.

The following story which is related in Wits, Fits, and Fancies, 1595, proves what Mr. Steevens has asserted: "A cardinal seeing a priest carrying a cudgel under his gown, reprimanded him ; his excuse was, that he only carried it to defend himself against the dogs of the town. Wherefore, I pray you, replied the cardinal, serves St. John's Gospel ? Alas, my lord, said the priest, these curs understand no Latin."

MALONE.

154. —monarch of the north.] The north was always supposed to be the particular habitation of bad spirits. Milton therefore assembles the rebel angels in the north. JOHNSON.

The boast of Lucifer in the xivth chapter of Isaiah is said to be, that he will sit upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north. STEEVENS.

159. Out of the powerful regions under earth,] I believe Shakspeare wrote legions. WARBURTON.

190. ——fell, banning hag!] To ban is to curse. So, in the Jew of Malta, 1633 :

“ I ban their souls to everlasting pains.”

STEEVENS.

210. As plays the sun upon the glassy streams, &c.] This comparison, made between things which seem sufficiently unlike, is intended to express the softness and delicacy of lady Margaret's beauty, which delighted, but did not dazzle : which was bright, but gave no pain by its lustre. JOHNSON.

Thus, Tasso :

“ Qual raggio in onda, le scintilla unriso

“ Negli umidi occhi tremulo——.”

HENLEY.

215. ——disable not thyself;] Do not represent thyself so weak. To disable the judgment of another was, in that age, the same as to destroy its credit or authority. JOHNSON.

So, in As You Like It, act V. ——“ If again, it was not well cut, he disabled my judgment.” STEEVENS.

232. ——a cooling card.] So, in Marius and Sylla, 1594 :

“ I'll have a present cooling card for you.”

237. ——a wooden thing.] Is an aukward business, an undertaking not likely to succeed.

So, in Lylly's Galathea, 1592 : “ Would I were out of of these woods, for I shall have but wooden luck."

Again, in his Maid's Metamorphosis, 1600 :

" My master takes but wooden pains."

Again, in the Knave of Spades, &c. no date,

" To make an end of that same wooden phrase."

STEEVENS.

304. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth,

To be the princely bride of such a lord ;] To woo her little worth—may mean—to court her small share of merit. But I would rather point the passage thus :

Since thou dost deign to woo her, little worth

To be the princely bride of such a lord.

i. e, little deserving to be the wife of such a prince.

MALONE.

339. To send such peevish tokens——] Peevish, for childish.

WARBURTON.

See a note on Cymbeline, act I. sc. vii: "He's strange and peevish."

STEEVENS.

345. Mad, natural graces——] So, the old copy.

The modern editors have been content to read her natural graces. By the word mad, however, I believe the poet only meant wild, or uncultivated. In the former of these significations he appears to have used it in Othello——he she lov'd prov'd mad. Which Dr. Johnson has properly interpreted, We call a wild girl, to this day, a mad-cap.

Mad, in some of the ancient books of gardening, is used as an epithet to plants which grow rampant and wild.

STEEVENS.

Pope had, perhaps, this line in his thoughts when he wrote,

" And

“ And snatch a grace beyond the reach of art.”
In The Two Noble Kinsmen, by Beaumont and Fletcher, mad is used in the same manner as in the text;

“ Is it not mad lodging in these wild woods here ?”

MALONE.

353. ———timeless———] is untimely. So, in Drayton's Legend of Robert Duke of Normandy:

“ Thy strength was buried in his timeless death.”

STEEVENS.

355. Decrepit miser!] Miser has no relation to avarice in this passage, but simply means a miserable creature. So, in the Interlude of Jacob and Esau, 1568:

“ But as for these misers within my father's tent.”

Again, in Lord Sterline's tragedy of Cræsus, 1604:

“ Or think'st thou me of judgment too remiss,

“ A miser that in miserie remains,

“ The bastard child of fortune, barr'd from bliss,

“ Whom heav'n doth hate, and all the world disdains ?”

Again, in Holinshed, p. 760, where he is speaking of the death of Richard III. “ And so this miser, at the same verie point, had like chance and fortune, &c.”

Again, p. 951, among the last words of lord Cromwell: “ ———for if I should so doo, I were a very wretch and a miser.” Again, ibid. “ ———and so patiently suffered the stroke of the ax, by a ragged and butcherlie miser, which ill-favourdlie performed the office.”

STEEVENS.

365. ———that thou wilt be so obstacle!] A vulgar corruption corruption of obstinate, which I think has oddly lasted since our author's time till now. JOHNSON.

The same corruption may be met with in other writers. Thus, in Chapman's May-day, 1611:

“An obstacle young thing it is.”

Again, in The Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631:

“Be not obstacle, old duke.” STEEVENS.

370. ———my noble birth.

—————’Tis true I gave a noble—————] This passage seems to corroborate an explanation, somewhat far-fetched, which I have given in Henry IV. of the nobleman and Royal man. JOHNSON.

397. No, misconceived!—————] i. e. No, ye misconceivers, ye who mistake me and my qualities. STEEVENS.

422. ———Alençon! that notorious Machiavel!] Machiavel being mentioned somewhat before his time, this line is by some of the editors given to the players, and ejected from the text. JOHNSON.

The character of Machiavel seems to have made so very deep an impression on the dramatick writers of this age, that he is many times as prematurely spoken of. So, in the Valiant Welchman, 1615, one of the characters bids Caradoc, i. e. Caractacus, “—————read Machiavel:

“Princes that would aspire, must mock at hell.”

Again:

“—————my brain

“Italianates my barren faculties

“To Machiavelian blackness————” STEEVENS.

437. ———darkness and the gloomy shade of death——]

The

The expression is scriptural : “ Whereby the day-spring from on high hath visited us, to give light to them that sit in darkness and the shadow of death.”

MALONE.

438. ——— till mischief and despair

Drive you to break your necks,—] Perhaps Shakspeare intended to remark, in this execration, the frequency of suicide among the English, which has been commonly imputed to the gloominess of their air.

JOHNSON.

469. ——— poison'd voice,] Poison'd voice agrees well enough with baneful enemies, or with baleful, if it can be used in the same sense.

JOHNSON.

470. ——— baleful enemies.] Baleful is sorrowful ; I therefore rather imagine that we should read baneful, hurtful or mischievous.

JOHNSON.

Baleful had anciently the same meaning as baneful. It is an epithet very frequently bestow'd on poisonous plants and reptiles. So, in Romeo and Juliet :

“ With baleful weeds, and precious juiced flowers.”

STEEVENS.

482. ——— with a coronet ;] Coronet is here used for a crown.

JOHNSON.

498. ——— upon comparison ?] Do you stand to compare your present state, a state which you have neither right or power to maintain, with the terms which we offer ?

JOHNSON.

500. ——— accept the little thou usurp'st,

Of benefit——] Benefit is here a term of law. Be content to live as the beneficiary of our king.

JOHNSON

530. So am I driven,——] The simile is somewhat obscure: he seems to mean, that as a ship is driven against the tide by the wind, so he is driven by love against the current of his interest.

JOHNSON.

554. ——at a triumph——] That is, at the sports by which a triumph is celebrated.

JOHNSON.

579. ——by attorneyship ;] By the intervention of another man's choice ; or the discretionary agency of another.

JOHNSON.

583. It most of all these reasons bindeth us,] The word it is not in the old copy.

MALONE.

587. Whereas the contrary bringeth forth bliss.] The word forth, which is not in the first folio, was supplied I think unnecessarily, by the second. Contrary was, I believe, used by the author as a quadrasyllable, as if it were written conterary ; according to which pronunciation the meter is not defective :

Whereas the conterary bringeth bliss——

In the same manner Shakspeare frequently uses Henry as a trisyllable, and hour and fire as dissyllables.

MALONE.

609. As I am sick with working of my thoughts.] So, in King Henry V.

“ Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege. ”

The recurrence of the same expression in the plays indisputably written by Shakspeare, and in these three parts of K. Henry VI. is an additional proof that the latter were composed by him.

MALONE.

620. If you do censure me, &c.] To censure is here simply to judge. If in judging me you consider the past frailties of your own youth. JOHNSON.

624. —ruminare my grief.] Grief, in the first line, is taken generally for pain or uneasiness; in the second, specially for sorrow. JOHNSON.

Reasons for Printing this WORK, and Observations on it's Propriety.

In the first Place, The Publisher is ambitious of producing a Work which may attract the admiration of all Europe, in hopes of deriving a proportionate share of reputation and advantage to himself; he, therefore, fixes on our immortal Dramatic Bard.

Secondly, A polite and well-informed class of Readers having declared it as their opinion, that SHAKSPEARE has been elucidated into obscurity, suggested first the design of printing his Plays, entire, cleared from the incumbrance and interruption of Notes.—The text of Dr. JOHNSON, and Mr. STEEVENS, is consequently preferred, which, as Mr. MALONE observes, seems now, indeed, finally settled, by a diligent collation of all the old copies hitherto discovered, and the judicious restoration of ancient readings.—The rejection of all Notes, from the page of the Text, is even approved by Dr. JOHNSON himself, who says, that “The reader is seldom pleased to find his “ opinion anticipated—it is natural to delight more in what we find,
“ or make, than in what we receive.—Judgment, like other facul“ ties, is improved by practice, and its advancement is hindered by “ submission to dictatorial decisions.”

In order to obviate every possible objection, and to accommodate this Edition to the taste of every reader—the Prefaces, Introductions, Advertisements—the historical and literary information of every Editor of SHAKSPEARE, of which there have not been less than eight, as well as the Notes and critical Illustrations of every Commentator, of which there are upwards of thirty—will be printed in a distinct, compact, and clear point of view, referring familiarly from Text to Notes, and from Commentaries to Text, by the mode of printing—so that, in fact, this Edition will comprise the labours of eight EDITORS, and the elucidations of, at least, thirty ANNOTATORS.

As to the Embellishments, they will be new and magnificent. The Public have much to expect from the superior talents of Mr. LOUTHERBOURG—his having long lived in habits of intimacy with Mr. GARRICK, his familiarity with the stage, and dramatic effect, added to the RENOWN he has acquired in every line of his profession, promises to soar still higher on the present occasion.

The Engravings of Mr. BARTOLOZZI are secure of praise and admiration in every part of the world; and the rest shall be as near his standard of merit, as the Artists of England and France can produce.

Such is the design, and the Publisher confidently hopes, that the execution of it will transcend his feeble description.—He is aware of having many impediments opposed to its circulation, through the usual channels of the trade; he foresees a host of foes, and the powerful opponents with whom he must, in consequence, have to combat—but, shielded as he is by a firm resolution, and the spirit of his cause, he will boldly meet his adversaries, and vindicate his claim to public protection.

JOHN BELL.

4 si fr is sp

Authors contained in BELL's Beautiful Edition of Poets of Great Britain,

the POETICAL WORKS complete, of every age, from CHAUCER, inclusive, who died in the THURCHILL, inclusive, who died in the year 1764, of each Author in the first Volume of their respective Prices of complete Sets to be had of the Publisher, Library, Strand.

Sets, one hundred and nine volumes, neatly		£.	s.	d.
and titled.....		8	8	0
Calf, double lettered.....		12	12	0
Calf, gilt.....		13	13	0
Calf, gilt, elegantly marbled and registered.....		16	16	0
Calf, bound superbly in Morocco, gilt edges....		33	0	0
CHAUCER....	14 vols	£1	1	0
SPENSER....	8 do.	0	12	0
DONNE....	3 do.	0	4	6
WALLER....	2 do.	0	3	0
MILTON....	4 do.	0	6	0
BUTLER....	3 do.	0	4	6
DENHAM....	1 do.	0	1	6
COWLEY....	4 do.	0	6	0
DRYDEN....	3 do.	0	4	6
ROSCOMMON....	1 do.	0	1	6
BUCKINGHAM....	1 do.	0	1	6
KING....	2 do.	0	3	0
PRIOR....	3 do.	0	4	6
LANDSOWN....	1 do.	0	1	6
POMFRET....	1 do.	0	1	6
SWIFT....	4 do.	0	6	0
CONGREVE....	1 do.	0	1	6
ADDISON....	1 do.	0	1	6
ROWE....	1 do.	0	1	6
WATTS....	7 do.	0	10	6
PHILIPS, J. }	1 do.	0	1	6
SMITH }	2 do.	0	3	0
PARNELL....	1 do.	0	1	6
CARTH....	1 do.	0	3	0
FENTON....	1 vol.	£0	1	6
TICKELL....	1 do.	0	1	6
SOMERVILLE....	2 do.	0	3	0
POPE....	4 do.	0	6	0
GAY....	3 do.	0	4	6
BROOME....	1 do.	0	1	6
YOUNGE....	4 do.	0	6	0
SAVAGE....	2 do.	0	3	0
PITT....	1 do.	0	1	6
THOMSON....	2 do.	0	3	0
PHILIPS, A....	1 do.	0	1	6
DYER....	1 do.	0	1	6
WEST, GILB....	1 do.	0	1	6
LYTTTELTON....	1 do.	0	1	6
HAMMOND, }	1 do.	0	1	6
COLLINS, }	1 do.	0	1	6
MOORE....	1 do.	0	1	6
SHENSTONE....	2 do.	0	3	0
MALLET....	1 do.	0	1	6
ARMSTRONG....	1 do.	0	1	6
GRAY, }	1 do.	0	1	6
WEST, R. }	1 do.	0	1	6
AKENSIDE....	2 do.	0	3	0
CUNNINGHAM....	1 do.	0	1	6
CHURCHILL....	3 do.	0	4	6

... fifty Authors,

Johnson, Samuel, 1709-1784

Annotations upon King Henry V. and King Henry VI. part I

London 1787

P.o.angl. 360 r-53

urn:nbn:de:bvb:12-bsb10749370-7